Myth and Memory John Sutton Lutz, 2011-11-01 The moment of contact between two peoples two alien societies marks the opening of an epoch and the joining of histories What if it had happened differently The stories that indigenous peoples and Europeans tell about their first encounters with one another are enormously valuable historical records but their relevance extends beyond the past Settler populations and indigenous peoples the world over are engaged in negotiations over legitimacy power and rights These struggles cannot be dissociated from written and oral accounts of contact moments which not only shape our collective sense of history but also guide our understanding of current events For all their importance contact stories have not been systematically or critically evaluated as a genre Myth and Memory explores the narratives of indigenous and newcomer populations from New Zealand and across North America from the Lost Colony of Roanoke on the Atlantic seaboard of the

United States to the Pacific Northwest and as far as Sitka Alaska It illustrates how indigenous and explorer accounts of the same meetings reflect fundamentally different systems of thought and focuses on the cultural misunderstandings embedded in these stories The contributors discuss the contemporary relevance production and performance of Aboriginal and European contact narratives and introduce new tools for interpreting the genre They argue that we are still in the contact zone striving to understand the meaning of contact and the relationship between indigenous and settler populations
