Love-Letters to Victor Hugo Juliette Drouet, 2015-12-29 Sunday 8 30 p m 1833 Before beginning to copy or count words 59 I must write you one line of love my dear little lunatic I love you do you understand I love you This is a profession of faith which comprises all my duty and integrity I love you ergo I am faithful to you I see only you think only of you speak only to you touch only you breathe you desire you dream of you in a word I love you that means everything Do not therefore give way any more to melancholy permit yourself to be loved and to be happy Fear nothing from me never doubt me and we shall be blissful beyond words I am expecting you shortly and am ready with warm and tender caresses which I hope will cheer you Your Juju 1833 Since you left me I carry death in my heart If you go to the ball to night it must be at the cost of a definite rupture between us The pain I suffer at imagining you moving among that throng of fascinating careless women is too great for you to be able to inflict it without incurring guilt towards me Write to me Care of Madame K If I do not hear from you before midnight I shall understand that you care very little for me that all is over between us and for ever J Wednesday 2 30 p m 1833 I cannot refrain dearly beloved from commenting upon the profound melancholy you were in this morning and upon the doubt you manifest on every occasion as to the sincerity of my love This unjustifiable suspicion on your part disheartens me beyond all expression It intimidates me and makes me fear to confide to you the incidents my dubious position exposes me to To day for instance I concealed from you the visit of a creditor who presented himself to the porter but was not shown up I paid him out of my own resources without your knowledge because you are always telling me I do not love you This expression from you makes me feel that you hold a shameful opinion of me and my character rendered possible perhaps by my situation but none the less false unjust and cruel I love you because I love you because it would be impossible for me not to love you I love you without question without calculation without reason good or bad faithfully with all my heart and soul and every faculty Believe it for it is true If you cannot believe I being at your side I will make a drastic effort to force you to do so I shall have the mournful satisfaction of sacrificing myself utterly to a distrust as absurd as it is unfounded Meanwhile I ask your pardon for the guilty thought that came to me this morning and which may possibly recur if you continue to see in my love only a mean spirited compliance and an unworthy speculation This letter is very lengthy and very sad to write I trust with all my soul that I may never have to reiterate its sentiments I love you Indeed I love you Believe in me Juliette Wednesday 8 15 p m 1833
