David S. Kerr

The Farther Shore A Natural History Of Perception 1798 1985:

Jewish Identity and Civilizing Processes S. Russell, 1996-11-04 Jewish Identity and Civilizing Processes examines the history of Jewish experience in Western Europe from the early Middle Ages to the twentieth century using the sociological theory and method of Norbert Elias. Attention is focused on the notion of interdependence and the intertwining processes of the civilization of behaviour and character and the formation of modern states as these specifically affected Jewry and help to shed light on the problem of anti-Semitism.

A World of Their Own Making John R. Gillis, 1997 Discusses ritual events we regard as family traditions and how they must be open to perpetual revision so we can satisfy our human needs and changing circumstances.

Notations Of The Wild Gyorgyi Voros, 1997-02 Focusing on three governing metaphors in Stevens's poems Nature as house body and self the author argues that Stevens's youthful wilderness experience yielded his primary poetic subject the relationship between humans and nature and shifted his understanding of nature from romantic to phenomenological. She draws on the extraliterary discourses of phenomenology and ecology mapping the landscape of Stevens's career and canon. Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR Dramas of Solitude Randall Roorda, 1998-02-26 Brings the insights of narrative theory to bear upon the genre of nature writing to explore the social or ethical purposes of solitude in stories of retreat in nature.

Sensory Worlds in Early America Peter Charles Hoffer, 2004-12-01 Honorable Mention History Category Professional and Scholarly Publishing Awards Association of American Publishers Over the past half century historians have greatly enriched our understanding of America's past broadening their fields of inquiry from such traditional topics as politics and war to include the agency of class race ethnicity and gender and to focus on the lives of ordinary men and women. We now know that homes and workplaces form a part of our history as important as battlefields and the corridors of power. Only recently however have historians begun to examine the fundamentals of lived experience and how people perceive the world through the five senses. In this ambitious work Peter Charles Hoffer presents a sensory history of early North America offering a bold new understanding of the role that sight sound smell taste and touch played in shaping the lives of Europeans Indians and Africans in the New World. Reconstructing the most ephemeral aspects of America's colonial past the choking stench of black powder the cacophony of unfamiliar languages the taste of fresh water and new foods the first sight of strange peoples and foreign landscapes the rough texture of homespun the clumsy weight of a hoe Hoffer explores the impact of sensuous experiences on human thought and action. He traces the effect sensation and perception had on the cause and course of events conventionally attributed to deeper cultural and material circumstances. Hoffer revisits select key events encounters and writings from America's colonial past to uncover the sensory elements in each and decipher the ways in which sensual data were mediated by prevailing and often conflicting cultural norms. Among the episodes he reexamines are the first meetings of Europeans and Native Americans belief in and encounters with the supernatural the experience of slavery and slave revolts the physical and emotional fervor of the Great Awakening and the feelings that prompted the Revolution Imaginatively conceived deeply informed and elegantly written Sensory Worlds of Early America convincingly establishes sensory experience as a legitimate object of historical inquiry and vividly brings America's colonial era to life

The Global Age Martin Albrow, 1997 Taking issue with those who see recent social transformations as an extension of modernity the author contends that social theory must confront an epochal change from the modern era to a new era of globality in which human beings can conceive of forces at work on a global scale and in which they espouse values that take the globe as their reference point The book begins by assessing the problems of writing about modernity showing how narratives of an endlessly self-perpetuating modern age were intrinsic to the modern project the attempt by Enlightenment philosophers to transform the everyday world in accord with science and logic under the auspices of the nation state Now we are beginning to realize that the nation state and the modern project cannot renew themselves endlessly through expansion Instead the author contends the age has culminated in its own dissolution and globality has supplanted modernity as the basis for action and social organization In theorizing the global age he considers the worldwide environmental consequences of aggregate human activities the reconception of human security in the age of nuclear weapons technological advances in communication systems the rise of a global economy and the growing reflexivity of global consciousness as people and groups begin to refer to the globe as the frame for their beliefs The book concludes by examining the consequences of the Global Age thesis for politics identifying a new popular construction of the state that the author terms performative citizenship In the modern age the nation state was the central power and citizens were beneficiaries of that power with rights and duties In the global age citizens respond to the lack of central power by creating or performing the state themselves The global managerial class uses the skills learned in the bureaucracy of the nation state to bring pressure on national governments in the interests of global economic environmental or human rights issues

Glorious Visions Helene Furján, 2011-05-05 Strongly interdisciplinary in its scope this book situates Soane's house museum within the broader context of early nineteenth century British aesthetics theories of taste and cultural currents viewing it as a cultural and artistic product as well as an architectural and museological one

Closing an Era Richard J. Cox, 2000-09-30 The importance of records in modern society is explored by re-examining some of the historical antecedents for critical functions in the modern records professions The motivation for writing this book comes from a conviction of the importance of records and records professionals in organizations and society as well as the need to possess a stronger sense of the events trends people debates and controversies producing the modern records professions Archivists and records managers have tended to discount the importance of their historical antecedents ignoring the fact that many of the current debates and issues before the profession are not new but embedded in the historical evolution of the records professions Re-examining some of the historical origins helps records professionals to re examine their mission to manage records for the benefit of organizations and of all of society Such re evaluation also helps to remind records professionals and others that the concerns generated by new electronic recordkeeping technologies are not new at all but built deep within the fabric of traditional records creation and administration *E.A.
