ADDED BENEFITS

The more likely it is that smoking is a new non-productive (cause) to many life insurance policies—one that has depressed profit the most significantly. For instance, Prudential Life and Accident offers a 10 percent reduction for those who consume a bowl a day, but they have not provided a cigarette in at least a year. Some companies require a blood test to prove the point. The result makes a big difference in the money you pay. According to the American Council on Life Insurance, smokers have 10 percent more policies today than in 1977 at an average value of $63,000, or 205 percent increase, in value over the last six years.
