which practical Ethics are treated with more acuteness of observation dignity of expression or richness of illustration than in many of these essays In 1752 Johnson lost his wife and a licentiate which he felt and spoke of to the end of his life and although not accustomed or partial to elegant female society he took into his house as an inmate Mrs Ann Williams the daughter of a physician who had spent his time and his fortune in attempting to discover the longitude The destitute situation of this lady who was blind and in poverty excited the benevolence of Johnson who took care that she should not want About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
