Libellus a Margareta More [pseud.] Quindecim Annos Nata, Chelseiæ Inceptus ... Anne Manning,1896 The Household of Sir Thos More Anne Manning,2015-06-11 Excerpt from The Household of Sir Thos More The author of The Household of Sir Thomas More Anne Manning who died in 1885 is known to this generation by only a few of her many stories of which The Old Chelsea Bun Shop Mary Powell which tells the story of Milton s wife and A Noble Purpose Nobly Won are perhaps the most read But she was a delightful writer who had a singular faculty of putting herself into the past and she never did this with more reality and warmth of feeling than in the following story It may seem to some readers that she would have done better had she kept less to the old spelling of the more ordinary words but if this is a drawback the whole effect of the book otherwise is to make transparently and perfectly natural the picture of More's day. Its truth to the period may best be understood by comparing the story told in the diary of Margaret More with the life of her father written by her husband William Roper which is here prefixed to the supposed story. If we would know Sir Thomas More from another and critically retrospective point of view we can turn to the lucid account given of him by M. Henri Bremond in the new series of Lives of the Saints published by Messrs Duckworth. Any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works.
