Growing Up Global Institute of Medicine, National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Population, Panel on Transitions to Adulthood in Developing Countries, 2005-06-25 The challenges for young people making the transition to adulthood are greater today than ever before Globalization with its power to reach across national boundaries and into the smallest communities carries with it the transformative power of new markets and new technology At the same time globalization brings with it new ideas and lifestyles that can conflict with traditional norms and values And while the economic benefits are potentially enormous the actual course of globalization has not been without its critics who charge that to date the gains have been very unevenly distributed generating a new set of problems associated with rising inequality and social polarization Regardless of how the globalization debate is resolved it is clear that as broad global forces transform the world in which the next generation will live and work the choices that today's young people make or others make on their behalf will facilitate or constrain their success as adults Traditional expectations regarding future employment prospects and life experiences are no longer valid Growing Up Global examines how the transition to adulthood is changing in developing countries and what the implications of these changes might be for those responsible for designing youth policies and programs in particular those affecting adolescent reproductive health The report sets forth a framework that identifies criteria for successful transitions in the context of contemporary global changes for five key adult roles adult worker citizen and community participant spouse parent and household manager

Growing Up Global National Research Council (U.S.). Panel on Transitions to Adulthood in Developing Countries, Cynthia B. Lloyd, 2005 Women's Empowerment in Agriculture Esha Sraboni, Hazel J. Malapit, Agnes R. Quisumbing, Akhter U. Ahmed, 2013-11-01 Women's low status and persistent gender gaps in health and education in South Asia contribute to chronic child malnutrition Smith et al 2003 and food insecurity von Grebmer et al 2009 even as other determinants of food security such as per capita incomes have improved This is particularly relevant for Bangladesh where chronic food insecurity continues to be an important issue despite steady advances in food production To be able to leverage agriculture as an engine of inclusive growth there is a need to develop indicators for measuring women's empowerment examine its relationship to various food security outcomes and monitor the impact of interventions to empower women Using nationally representative survey data from Bangladesh we examine the relationship between women's empowerment in agriculture and two measures of household food security per adult equivalent calorie availability and dietary diversity We use the Women's Empowerment in Agriculture Index to assess the extent of women's empowerment in agriculture and instrumental variables techniques to correct for the potential endogeneity of empowerment We find that the overall women's empowerment score the number of groups in which women actively participate women's control of assets and a narrowing gap in empowerment between men and women within households are positively associated with calorie availability and dietary diversity 2019 course have changed considerably in recent decades Many of our assumptions about leaving home starting new relationships and having children have been turned upside down It is now almost as common to have children prior to marriage as afterwards and certainly much more common to live together before marrying than to marry without first living together Women are more likely to remain in the labour force after having children and many families struggle with problems of work family balance at some stage in their lives particularly when they have young children But how much has really changed Is there really more diversity in how individuals transition through these life course stages or just variations at the margin with most people following a standard work and family life course This volume makes use of rich longitudinal data from a unique Australian project to examine these issues Drawing on broader theories of social change and demographic transitions in an international context each chapter provides a detailed empirical assessment of the ways in which Australian adults negotiate their work and family lives In doing so the volume provides important insight into the ways in which recent demographic social and economic changes both challenge and reproduce gender divisions
