Structuring The Information Age Life Insurance And Technology In The Twentieth Century:

Structuring the Information Age JoAnne Yates, 2005-06-22 Structuring the Information Age provides insight into the largely unexplored evolution of information processing in the commercial sector and the underrated influence of corporate users in shaping the history of modern technology JoAnne Yates examines how life insurance firms where good record keeping and repeated use of massive amounts of data were crucial adopted and shaped information processing technology through most of the twentieth century The book analyzes this process beginning with tabulating technology the most immediate predecessor of the computer and continuing through the 1970s with early computers Yates elaborates two major themes the reciprocal influence of information technology and its use and the influence of past practices on the adoption and use of new technologies In the 1950s insurance industry leaders recognized that computers would enable them to integrate processes previously handled separately but they also understood that they would have to change their ways of working profoundly to achieve this integration When it came to choosing equipment and applications most companies ultimately preferred a gradual incremental migration to an immediate and radical transformation In tracing this process Yates shows that IBM's successful transition from tabulators to computers in part reflected that vendor's ability to provide large customers such as insurance companies with the necessary products to allow gradual change In addition this detailed industry case study helps explain information technology's so called productivity paradox showing that firms took roughly two decades to achieve the initial computerization and process integration that the industry set as objectives in the 1950s

Humans at Work in the Digital Age Shawna Ross, Andrew Pilsch, 2019-12-05 Humans at Work in the Digital Age explores the roots of twenty first century cultures of digital textual labor mapping the diverse physical and cognitive acts involved and recovering the invisible workers and work that support digital technologies Drawing on 14 case studies organized around four sites of work this book shows how definitions of labor have been influenced by the digital technologies that employees use to produce interpret or process text Incorporating methodology and theory from a range of disciplines and highlighting labor issues related to topics as diverse as census tabulation market research electronic games digital archives and 3D modeling contributors uncover the roles played by race class gender sexuality and national politics in determining how narratives of digital labor are constructed and erased Because each chapter is centered on the human cost of digital technologies however it is individual people immersed in cultures of technology who are the focus of the volume rather than the technologies themselves Humans at Work in the Digital Age shows how humanistic inquiry can be a valuable tool in the emerging conversation surrounding digital textual labor As such this book will be essential reading for academics and postgraduate students engaged in the study of digital humanities human computer interaction digital culture and social justice race class gender and sexuality in digital realms the economics of the internet and technology in higher education

Materiality and Time Francois-Xavier de Vaujany, N. Mitev, P. Laniray, E. Vaast, 2014-09-30 The book explores how time is materialized and performed in organizations examines how organizations and organizational members are constituted by and constitutive of material artefacts and reflects on what a historical perspective on these materializations can bring to the study of organizations
