The Process of Technological Innovation National Science Foundation (U.S.). Division of Industrial Science and Technological Innovation. Productivity Improvement Research Section, 1983 Understanding Early Adolescent Self and Identity Thomas M. Brinthaupt, Richard P. Lipka, 2012-02-01 What are the major self and identity concerns for early adolescents What are the applications and interventions that can address those concerns helping to ease the transition into later adolescence and adulthood Providing a broad and interdisciplinary approach to studying the self the contributors emphasize the practical implications of their work for understanding early adolescent self and identity and for designing interventions that facilitate development and adjustment The book consists of four major sections in which contributors address conceptual issues school transitions peer and behavioral problems and intervention programs The Social and Spatial Ecology of Work Rita Gorawara-Bhat, 2005-12-11 The Social and Spatial Ecology of Work is an important contribution to the Psychology of Work and Industry It is a theoretically informed case study unique in that it takes full measure of the importance of physical space and the built environment for the quality of people's daily working lives and the attainment of organizational goals Rita Gorawara Bhat provides us with a theoretical framework for understanding how important space and environment are for experiential aspects of work as they are contextualized in social relations linked to status and role and embedded in organizational culture and bureaucratic structure Her framework is a creatively synthetic one that draws notably from traditions in social psychology symbolic interactionism dramaturgical sociology and social ecology Sociologists will find themselves in comfortable surroundings this is a case study of a major social science research center affiliated with a prominent midwestern university Studies carried out by psychologists and social psychologists in the 1960s and 1970s held great promise for introducing a language and methodology for inquiry about the importance of the physical environment for social life However the overall impact of this research turned out to be short lived

perhaps owing to overly deterministic assumptions about space and spatial constraints Person-Environment Psychology and Mental Health William E. Martin, Jr., Jody L. Swartz-Kulstad, William E. Martin, 2000-03 In recent years mental health professionals who have traditionally focused on the emotional state of the individual have come to realize that problems arise from the unique interactions between particular individuals and environments From necessity they are beginning to look at context no longer can they place the responsibility for mental health on the shoulders of the person alone Most attention has been paid to the impact of educational and work settings but it is clear that all life settings contribute meaningfully to positive psychological adaptation and must be considered in any attempt to understand a person's difficulties This book explores the crucial ramifications of new theory and research in person environment psychology for assessment and intervention All practitioners seeking to deliver effective mental health services to adolescents and adults will learn from it

The Many Faces of Dependency in Old Age Margret M. Baltes, 1996-07-28 Margret Baltes provides insights into the social foundation of dependency with a blend of theoretical and empirical argument Training Behaviour Therapists (Psychology Revivals) Derek Milne, 2015-03-27 Originally published in 1986 one of the major developments in behavioural psychotherapy and mental health in the previous decade had been the growing involvement of non psychologists in behaviour therapy This was a result of the fact that there were too few psychologists to cope with problem behaviour and that other professionals or carers began to appreciate more clearly their potential as agents of behaviour change Foremost among these mediators of therapy were parents nurses particularly psychiatric nurses and teachers especially remedial teachers Their involvement had greatly increased the efficiency of behaviour therapy at the time and opened up a new era in applied psychology It also entailed the development of new training formats evaluation procedures and implementation strategies The main aim of this book was to provide a summary of the research relevant to these issues and to offer practical guidelines to those who were interested in training or being trained as behaviour therapists For this reason there are chapters by researchers who have been involved in training parents nurses and teachers These chapters provide a detailed account of training in a form that was rarely available in published form at the time and even today should be of great assistance to readers Residential

Applied Ecological Psychology for Schools Within Communities Jody L. Swartz, William E. Martin, Jody L. Swartz-Kulstad, 2013-01-11 This volume provides a thorough examination of the interplay between individuals and their environment in the development and maintenance of problem behaviors and delineates procedures for conducting assessment intervention and prevention within the child's ecosystem As individuals structure change and organize their environments their environments work to do the same Environmental or contextual and individual variables act reciprocally to shape an individual's behavior For school aged youth this reality necessitates an ecological approach to assessment intervention and prevention Specifically problem behaviors are partly developed and maintained by a combination of factors present in the child's psychosocial ecosystem home school and community Although there is an abundance of theoretical applications and research supporting this concept the predominant trend has been to emphasize the properties of the person As a result one is left to assume that the genesis of difficulties in adaptation lies in internal or personal states and traits of the individual In contrast to traditional psychology theories which focus primarily on the individual incorporation of ecological psychology concepts allows for a more comprehensive and in depth analysis of sources contributing to the individual's ability to adapt to their psychosocial environment Ecological theories which drive assessment intervention and prevention efforts provide the necessary framework for assisting school aged youth and their associated ecological networks to cope with and overcome the multidetermined multifaceted concerns that arise during the school years However this is an often difficult and cumbersome task for educators parents and school systems to undertake To this end this volume focuses on the functional application of ecological psychology for schools within communities Each of the 10 chapters written by key figures in school family counseling and community psychology explores the use of ecological theory from a different perspective ranging from focus on the child the child within the classroom the classroom teacher and the community to considerations in working with special populations such as juvenile delinquents and in planning for developmental issues such as school to work transition The final chapter summarizes and integrates the previous chapters and provides suggestions for future directions in the field

Environmental Practice in the Human Services Bernard Neugeboren, 1996 Environmental Practice in the Human Services points to the need for the human services to return to their historic mission of environmental change It moves beyond the more general conceptual emphasis on person in environment toward the development of an environmental practice technology based on an intervention model which prescribes specific micro and macro roles and functions It may open the way to recapturing the conceptual breadth which characterized the first 40 years of social work as a professional and occupational entity The ecological perspective in social work has fostered an interest in the impact of social environments on service consumers Environmental Practice in the Human Services tries to rectify the historical imbalance in the human services that has emphasized people changing methods giving secondary emphasis to environmental change It instructs students preparing for practice in the human services as well as agency practitioners in the knowledge and skills necessary in environmental practice Cases in environmental practice are used to illustrate how these skills are utilized in actual practice situations The book's scope includes practice at the direct service administration planning and social policy levels it integrates micro and macro practice and shows how these two levels of practice are interdependent This enables human service practitioners to create and or modify social environments to enhance the functioning of clients being served in human service programs Topics covered include important skills in environmental practice including decisionmaking negotiating and leadership community practice and resource coordination social support the impact of organizational environments on practice environmental practice for the chronically disabled Author Neugeboren s approach is unique in its in depth focus on environmental practice applying concepts of social environment to specific practice roles This practice specific content which provides tools needed for environmental practice is in contrast to existing texts on the social environment which are very theoretical and not integrated with practice He includes material from the field of social ecology which has not been included in existing texts It shows how practitioners and administrators planners and policymakers can facilitate and support each other s work Reading Environmental Practice in the Human Services will enlighten students and practitioners with specific skills for impacting on different social environments to enhance client benefit It tells how a direct service practitioner can determine which organizational environments are suitable for particular client needs in making agency referrals It also provides administrators with information about designing planning and managing agencies with functional organizational environments which achieve effective services
