New Rules for Victims of Armed Conflicts Michael Bothe, K.J. Partsch, W.A. Solf, 2024-03-11 It is a major cultural achievement that violence in armed conflicts is restrained by international legal rules As the nature of these conflicts changes these rules have to be adapted accordingly in order to provide effective protection for the victims The adoption of the two Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions in 1977 was a major step in this development The authors who were involved in the negotiation of these two treaties give a first hand account of the meaning of the text and the intent of the negotiators The book is thus an important tool to better understand and implement these treaties which have proved their salutary importance in the all too many conflicts during the last decades The current volume is a revised reprint with new introductory materials of the original text published in 1982

Carmichael,2021-05-07 International law is so fundamentally distinct from domestic law that some even question whether it is the law at all Unlike domestic law in which the state can create enforce and interpret the laws there is no higher authority above states in international law As a result states serve as both creators enforcers and adjudicators of international law and are subject to it Most confoundingly even though there is no higher authority than states in the international system states tend to comply with international law most of the time Further when they do violation international law they go to great lengths to defend their actions as within compliance with the law To understand when and why states treat international law as the law in our international system one must understand both the components of a sound legal argument and the political motivations shaping how laws are created when they are followed and when they are ignored
