Coping Systems for Employee Turnover Sebastian Reiche,2003-02-03 Inhaltsangabe Abstract As business activities become increasingly global and cross nationally intertwined human resource management is no longer defined by national boundaries In particular multinational corporations MNCs face the challenge of managing their globally dispersed work force effectively Yet the field of international human resource management IHRM remains an understudied domain lacking substantial empirical and conceptual research Also a prevailing focus on quantitative data suggests a need for deeper qualitative investigations which allows a more profound assessment of the context in which IHRM unfolds By addressing IHRM at MNCs the current empirical work contributes additional scientific insights into this domain In this respect the author has selected an approach of inductive comparative case study research mainly based on qualitative data that enables the generation of theory through an iterative data driven process This method has been applied to investigate IHRM because it is particularly fruitful when examining new and narrowly developed scientific fields as well as considering contextual conditions Thus a multiple case study was conducted through exploratory and semi structured interviews with managerial employees at six western MNCs which maintain their regional headquarters for South East Asia in Singapore The initial guiding objective was to provide a more thorough understanding of the forces that influence IHRM Due to the exploratory nature of the research set up this broad focus has narrowed during the conduct of the study and the subsequent data analysis

Indeed, by acknowledging the critical role that local nationals play at the host country level it will be increasingly imperative for international organizations to establish effective retention strategies. Despite this obvious significance the field of managing employee turnover also remains considerably underdeveloped. Building on the results of the conducted multiple case study the purpose of
