The Birth of British Television Mark Aldridge, 2017-09-16 When the BBC launched the world's first regular high definition television service on 2 November 1936 it was the culmination of decades of technological innovations More than this however the service meant that the principle of television had finally found its place The Birth of British Television A History traces the early history and development of television from the experiments of amateurs to the institutionalised developments that led to the world's first regular high definition television service. Author Mark Aldridge provides a clear in depth and accessible introduction for those either exploring the period for the first time or seeking new insights into the beginnings of the industry. In tracing the origins and development of television Aldridge focuses on a number of important factors including the attitude of the press towards early television and examines the way that expectations of television changed over time prior to its official launch. Utilising new research this illuminating study examines how the aims for a new television service developed and the extent to which content and technology were linked. The Birth of British Television approaches this formative period from several perspectives from private individuals to the BBC and government while also examining the broader opinions at the time towards the new medium through press reports and feedback from the general public. Also included is an assessment of early programming which helps to offer a new and profound evaluation of the development of early television. Mark Aldridge is a Lecturer in Film and TV Studies at Southampton Solent University UK. He specialises in British television and both film and television history. His previous publications include T is for Television 2008 an analysis of the work of Russell T Davies co-written with Andy Murray.

Masters of the Post Duncan Campbell-Smith, 2011-11-03 The origins of the Post Office go back to the early years of the Tudor monarchy. Brian Tuke a former King's Bailiff in Sandwich was acknowledged as the first Master of the Posts by Cardinal Wolsey in 1512 and went on to build up a network of postmasters across England for Henry VIII. Over the following five hundred years the Royal Mail expanded to an unimaginable degree to become the largest employer in the country and the face of the British state for most people in their everyday lives. But it also faced the demands of an increasingly commercial marketplace. With the election of Margaret Thatcher in 1979 the possibility of privatising the Royal Mail has prompted passionate arguments and has added immeasurably to the difficulties of running it. In charting the whole of this extraordinary story Duncan Campbell Smith recounts a series of remarkable tales including how postal engineers built the first programmable computer for the wartime code breakers of Bletchley Park and how the Royal Mail managed to successfully continue delivering post to the front lines during two world wars but also how they failed to avert the Great Train Robbery of 1963. He brings to life many of the dominant personalities in the Royal Mail's history from Rowland Hill who imposed a uniform penny post and set the great Victorian expansion on its way to Tony Benn who championed the modernisation of the service in the 1960s and Tom Jackson who led the postal workers' biggest union through fifteen frequently stormy years up to 1982. This is the first complete history of the Royal Mail up to the present day based on its comprehensive archives and including the first detailed account of the past half century of Britain's postal history made possible by privileged access to confidential records. Today's debate over the future of the Royal Mail is shown to be just the latest chapter in a centuries old conflict between its roles raising revenue and serving the public. Will its employees remain like Brian Tuke's postmasters servants of the Crown? This book could hardly appear at a more timely moment
