The China Questions 2 Maria Adele Carrai,Jennifer Rudolph,Michael Szonyi,2022-08-30 Following the success of The China Questions a new volume of insights from top China specialists explains key issues shaping today s US China relationship For decades Americans have described China as a rising power That description no longer fits China has already risen What does this mean for the US China relationship For the global economy and international security Seeking to clarify central issues provide historical perspective and demystify stereotypes Maria Adele Carrai Jennifer Rudolph and Michael Szonyi and an exceptional group of China experts offer essential insights into the many dimensions of the world s most important bilateral relationship Ranging across questions of security economics military development climate change public health science and technology education and the worrying flashpoints of Hong Kong Taiwan and Xinjiang these concise essays provide an authoritative look at key sites of friction and potential collaboration with an eye on where the US China relationship may go in the future Readers hear from leading thinkers such as James Millward on Xinjiang Elizabeth Economy on diplomacy Shelley Rigger on Taiwan and Winnie Yip and William Hsiao on public health The voices included in The China Questions 2 recognize that the US China relationship has changed and that the policy of engagement needs to change too But they argue that zero sum thinking is not the answer Much that is good for one society is good for both we are facing not another Cold War but rather a complex and contextually rooted mixture of conflict competition and cooperation that needs to be understood on its own terms
