Despite their abundance in marine ecosystems, studies on siphonophores are limited. In this study, 26 species of siphonophores in the Northwest Pacific Ocean were identified during multiple cruises of the R/V ISABU from 2018–2020, and various factors that may affect the occurrence of siphonophores, including water temperature, salinity, zooplankton biomass, and trophic niche were investigated. Statistical analysis revealed that the distribution of siphonophores and their biomass could be divided into two water mass groups, affected by the Kuroshio and Oyashio Currents. The species with high contributions to distinguishing the water mass groups (including Chelophyes contorta, Dimophyes arctica, Bassia bassensis, and Eudoxoides spiralis—mainly belonging to the Diphyidae) showed species-specific correlations with water temperature and salinity. This suggests that diphyids can be used as indicator species for currents and hydrological factors that influence water mass. The biomass of siphonophores exhibited a trend opposite to that of non-gelatinous zooplankton and showed no association with other gelatinous zooplankton. These results can be interpreted from an ecological niche perspective. Through nitrogen and carbon stable isotope analyses, the dietary sources of siphonophores could potentially overlap with those of chaetognaths or non-gelatinous zooplankton. Because the trophic position of siphonophores (2.4–3.2) also falls in the range of those of chaetognaths (2.8–3.4) and non-gelatinous zooplankton including copepods, euphausiids, and amphipods (2.4–3.5), diet competition with carnivorous mesozooplankton could be predicted. Considering that the diversity and biomass of most siphonophores are strongly positively correlated with water temperature and salinity, expansion of the Kuroshio Current is expected to lead to an increase in siphonophores in the Northwest Pacific in the future. The findings of this study are anticipated to provide novel insights into climate change prediction and response and enhance our understanding of siphonophore communities.

Arai, 2009 Section 4 Ecology by Mary N Arai and Department of Biological Sciences University of Calgary Collected Reprints, 1986 Marine Plankton Claudia Castellani, Martin Edwards, 2017-09-01 A thorough understanding of planktonic organisms is the first step towards a real appreciation of the diversity biology and ecological importance of marine life A detailed knowledge of their distribution and community composition is particularly important since these organisms are often very delicate and sensitive to change and can be used as early indicators of environmental change Natural and man induced modification of the environment can affect both the distribution and composition of plankton with important ecological and economic impacts Marine Plankton provides a practical guide to plankton biology with a large geographic coverage spanning the North Sea to the north eastern Atlantic coast of the USA and Canada The book is divided into three sections an overview of plankton ecology an assessment of methodology in plankton research covering sampling preservation and counting of samples and a taxonomic guide richly illustrated with detailed line drawings to aid identification This is an essential reference text suitable for senior undergraduate and graduate students taking courses in marine ecology particularly useful for fieldwork as well as for professional marine biologists It will also be of relevance and use to environmental scientists conservation biologists marine resource managers environmental consultants and other specialised practitioners Advances in Marine Biology
