Abstract

Background: Randomised controlled trials are the gold standard for evaluating mental health care interventions. We assessed the content and quality of trials published in Acta Psychiatrica Scandinavica and Supplementum since 1948.

Methods: All trials were identified manually, quality assessed, data extracted, and sought on Medline.

Results: About 8.6% of all reports in the journal were clinical trials ($n = 582$) with the peak frequency in the 1980s. Most originate from Europe (80%) and focus on depression (~38%) or schizophrenia (27%). The median sample size is 44. We found only two trials that fully met the criteria of quality reporting RCTs set by CONSORT statements (0.34%) since 1996. Less than 50% of records were possible to identify by a Medline search using broad methodological terms.

Conclusion: Acta is a major source of health trials. The standard of reporting is similar to other journals but better adherence to CONSORT would ensure higher quality of reports and better dissemination.

Background

Randomised trials are now widely accepted as the "gold standard" for providing evidence on the effectiveness of health care interventions in general [1] as well as mental health care interventions in particular [2]. Random assignment greatly reduces the potential for bias in the allocation of interventions. It ensures that comparison groups are as similar as possible to each other in terms of both known and unknown possible predictors of treatment response [3]. Empirical evidence suggests that non-randomised studies tend to overestimate the effects of healthcare [4]. In addition, the extent and the direction of bias in these studies is often impossible to predict [5].

The use of randomised trials was largely restricted to evaluations of new drug therapies, either against an existing standard agent or against a placebo control. More recently, however, randomised controlled trials are being used to evaluate a much broader range of interventions [6].

Poorly conducted randomised trials, however, can provide biased results [7]. For example, allocation concealment, blinding, intention-to-treat analysis, and loss to follow-up are the critical items in the design and conduct of randomised trials, and an inadequately conceived, conducted and reported randomised trial may overestimate

Advances in Clinical Child Psychology Benjamin Lahey, 2013-11-11 Advances in Clinical Child Psychology is a serial publication designed to bring together original summaries of the most important new developments in the field of clinical psychology and its related disciplines Each chapter is written by a key figure in an innovative area of research or by an individual who is particularly well qualified to comment on a topic of major contemporary importance. These chapters provide convenient concise explorations of empirical and clinical advances in the field. The contents of Volume 7 reflect the broad changes that are occurring within the field. The continuing growth of research emphasis on etiology is seen in two chapters on the causative role played by chemical substances, one chapter on the effects of divorce on children and one on the influence of televised violence. The difficult issue of suicide by children and adolescents is dealt with. The role of cognition in behavior disorders is explored and the clinical applications of direct behavioral observation are evaluated. Although the fields of pediatric psychology and prevention have been treated in earlier volumes in the series, progress in these fields has been so rapid that chapters on each topic have been included in the present volume. We appreciate the roles played by the advisory editors in suggesting excellent topics and thoughtfully editing the chapters. As always, our strongest thanks go to the volume's authors for their outstanding contributions.

By Their Own Young Hand Keith Hawton, Karen Rodham, 2006-06-15. The authors identify the risk and protective factors for self-harm, exploring why some adolescents with suicidal thoughts go on to harm themselves while others do not, what motivates some young people to seek help, and whether distressed teenagers feel they receive the support they need.

Suicide in Children and Adolescents Syed Arshad Husain, Trish Vandiver, 1986. What Works for Whom? Peter Fonagy, David Cottrell, Jeannette Phillips, Dickon Bevington, Danya Glaser, Elizabeth Allison, 2014-10-17. The standard reference in the field, this acclaimed work synthesizes findings from hundreds of carefully selected studies of mental health treatments for children and adolescents. Chapters on frequently encountered clinical problems systematically review the available data, identify gaps in what is known, and spell out recommendations for evidence-based practice. The authors draw on extensive clinical experience as well as research expertise. Showcasing the most effective psychosocial and pharmacological interventions for young patients, they also address challenges in translating research into real-world clinical practice.

Suicide in Children and Adolescents George MacLean, 1990. Tilt Kalman J. Kaplan, 2020-04-01. An alternative to existing bipolar choices, this book looks at individuals and their distances from the self (individuation, deindividuation) and from others (attachment, detachment). Simultaneously theoretical, empirical, and applied, this book can be reasonably applied to all types of individuals involved in interpersonal situations regardless of culture, age, gender, or sexual orientations. Broken into four parts: In the first part, Definitions and Measurements, the author includes an introduction to the Individuation Attachment Questionnaire. Implications of TILT for Individuals is the basis for part two and includes a view of TILT across the life span. The next section extends the analysis to

TILT for Couples and Families The clinician counselors and individuals attempting to help himself herself are addressed in the final part TILT for the Clinician and includes application of TILT to everyday life The text brings to life through extensive description the questions and situations consistently raised in couples therapy space too much or not enough TILT Teaching Individuals To Live Together presents a unique model of individuation and attachment and was developed to facilitate the understanding of the complex relationship between these two developmental processes across the life span The model shows how we gradually develop our boundaries and hence reduce the need for defensive interpersonal walls The TILT Model has applications in the fields of therapy education and organizational development Thus it will be of interest to mental health professionals including psychotherapists psychologists counselors social workers and marriage and family therapists Practitioners of transactional analysis will find this book of supreme interest and usefulness
