going until they were literally falling apart These were known as non PSVs i e non public service vehicles On the other hand some very small independent fleets often with the title Luxury Coaches took great pride in their fleets They would purchase new coaches every two or three years and keep them in immaculate condition The net result was that British independent bus and coach operators in the 1960s had a fascinating variety of chassis and body makes and styles as well as liveries This book shows many of these as they were between fifty and sixty years ago      Southdown Ancillary Vehicles Simon Stanford,2022-02-15 With a range of previously unpublished photographs a unique look at this aspect of the beloved Southdown operator      British Buses Since 1945 John Creighton,1983      The National Bus Company Stephen Dowle,2017-03-15 Stephen Dowle presents a nostalgic look at the National Bus Company in the 1970s
