

himself, and their sons, of course, the patents that bore Leslie's first known name.

It was a good game, with plenty of leads. The trading company held most of the money by the end of the 1920s, and played their hand skillfully whenever their supremacy was threatened. When another company tried to play a card that in fact it didn't hold, the market was called in, on the basis of a United States judge. Two cases were called in, on the basis of a United States judge. Two cases were called in, on the basis of a United States judge. Two cases were called in, on the basis of a United States judge.

In 1910 the case of living versus Russell was brought before Judge Mervin of the United States Court of Delaware. The claim was for infringement of the Floyd Smith patents held by Irving. The defendant counter-claimed that the Smith patents were themselves invalidated by prior art - meaning that the concept of manual operation had not been introduced by Floyd Smith as it had been demonstrated by Leslie Lyons, but dated back to the era of Ed- ward Blackwell and Leo Stevens. The initial hearing before Charles Broadwick and Leo Stevens, the initial hearing brought together the greatest patoisists in the world of the time. Leslie Lyons came from England. First Broadwick was there, and then Lyons, and the whole of the original McCook team. Their arguments under oath represent the most brilliant account of patenting during the first thirty years of the century's Judge Mervin found in favour of Russell, but the decision was reversed on appeal. The Russell Parachute Company eventually is the appeals court. The Russell Parachute Company eventually is the appeals court. The Russell Parachute Company eventually is the appeals court.

In 1934, when Marjory Smith's company was making some small headway as a potential rival to the Irving monopoly in America, George Waite kept them in their place through a successful action for infringement of patents pertaining to shipping bin storage systems and the ripcord handle — the only two details of the Smith Safety Chain that Floyd Smith had failed to design around.

It is doubtful, however, if the cleverness of the Irving management, their strong bond of patronage, and the skill of their lawyers could alone have retained such a hold on the purchase industry. The proven quality of the product must be considered the primary reason why for twenty years the Irving 'crate' was virtually unrivalled. Had any other company been able to point to deficiencies in the Irving safety record, or had any of the more fervent had reason to doubt the reliability of the equipment, the story would have been different. The story would then have been
