Terrible Beyond Endurance? Michael Stohl, George Lopez, 1988-02-11 Stohl and Lopez argue that such developments in international aggressive policies demand more serious scholarly attention than has up to now been paid them and they suggest a number of emerging trends that warrant examination by political scientists Such trends include superpower deployment of the troops of regional power centers to avoid direct military action in the Third World renewed efforts by the United States to develop counterterrorist and rapid deployment approaches and the rise of terror bombing and related military acts even in arenas where conventional warfare is already being conducted The editors also argue that these trends will intensify in the future

West Germany's Foreign Policy Diane Rosolowsky, 1987-11-17 This work examines the positions of the Social Democratic and Green parties on the debate within the Federal Republic of Germany concerning security policy especially as it relates to NATO Since its founding in 1949 the Atlantic Alliance has provided a framework for relations between the United States and its European allies The United States is an important NATO member particularly because of its nuclear commitment to European defense The Federal Republic of Germany plays a pivotal role in NATO as well as it is the strongest European member in NATO's integrated command structure the major contributor of land forces and because of its geographic location NATO's first line of defense Thus the roles of the United States and West Germany in NATO are both key the former due to its nuclear capabilities and the latter because of its conventional force strength and front line position
