

inappropriate statistical analysis done by the measurer or the researcher, errors may creep into the measurement.

(iii) Situation: Situational factors also contribute to errors in measurement. Any situation that puts unnecessary strain on the respondent, tends to introduce errors in measurement. An interview is one example of such a situation. Apart from this, if the person feels that the situation does not protect anonymity, it also introduces error in measurement.

(iv) Test instrument: Errors may be introduced in the measurement due to poor psychometric qualities of the test and defective measuring instrument. Psychological tests having poor reliability and validity may result in measurement errors.

To avoid the errors resulting from the above-mentioned sources, it is essential that the researcher should try to eliminate or neutralise these possible errors as far as possible.

TESTING AND ASSESSMENT

The terms testing and assessment are often confused. Therefore, it is essential that these two terms should be clearly distinguished. The basic goal of assessment is to evaluate a person in terms of current and future functioning. In the process of assessment, behaviours are classified into different categories measured against a normative standard. Tests, on the other hand, are used in assessment processes. However, not all assessment techniques are tests. In the strict sense, any assessment technique is called a test only when its procedure for administration, scoring and interpretation are standardized, there is a standardization sample and there is evidence for its reliability and validity. Many so-called tests can more appropriately be called as assessment devices because they don't meet the minimum requirements of the test.

Testers And Testing The Sociology Of School Psychology:

Testers and Testing Carl Milofsky,1989 Carl Milofsky studies the organizational dilemmas that confront school psychologists and the strategies they employ to work effectively in schools He looks closely at the process of intelligence testing showing that important racial differences exist in the testing of black as opposed to white children He finds that psychologists spend two to three times longer testing white children than black children He argues that since test scores are not objective measures that can be interpreted quickly the time spent in testing is very important He explains these differences as a product of organizational differences in urban and non urban schools Urban school psychologists define their role passively and narrowly they think of themselves as bureaucrats and as a result urban children are more likely to receive hurried often careless testing Suburban psychologists often have a different sense of their job They think of themselves as professionals who serve children and defend them against an irrational coercive organization Smallville Carl Milofsky,2008 Familiar organizational theories often do not fit comfortably when applied to community level associations or small local nonprofit organizations In Smallville Carl Milofsky empirically and theoretically studies the organizational dynamics involved in this common American model Organizations functioning within a community are usually treated as separate units but when they all exist in the same place and tend to be made up of the same people who are living out different aspects of their identities in various settings a new analytical paradigm is required Milofsky s study culminates in the formulation of an innovative way of understanding this phenomenon an essential pioneering theory of transorganizations
