Zwarenstejn, 2013-06-29 General While there is an abundance of literature dealing with the American antitrust laws one can also observe that the application of this area of the law to foreign commerce is still in an evolutionary stage of development To some extent this can be quantifiably explained by pointing out that the rapid rise of the interests of the American business community in foreign commerce is only a fairly recent 1 phenomenon This participatory interest reveals a wide spectrum of commercial activities While the traditional concept of foreign commerce was often limited to thinking in terms of exports and imports present commercial activities include also such marketing methods as the establishment of foreign branches or subsidiaries or 2 the location of manufacturing processing or assembly plants abroad To this array of arrangements most of which contemplate a widening of the market potential we may add the current merger movement the conglomerate character of which has been termed its most unique characteristic 3 Little wonder that at least one author refers to the application of the 311 trust laws to foreign commerce as being still somewhat of a frontier area of the law 4 Because of the rapidly expanding participation of the American business community in international commerce a gradual evolution of the international dimensions of the American antitrust laws seems therefore within the realm of justified expectations
