Terrestrial Ecosystems Through Time Evolutionary Paleocology Of Terrestrial Plants And Animals:

Terrestrial Ecosystems Through Time Anna K. Behrensmeyer, 1992-08-15 Breathtaking in scope this is the first survey of the entire ecological history of life on land from the earliest traces of terrestrial organisms over 400 million years ago to the beginning of human agriculture By providing myriad insights into the unique ecological information contained in the fossil record it establishes a new and ambitious basis for the study of evolutionary paleoecology of land ecosystems A joint undertaking of the Evolution of Terrestrial Ecosystems Consortium at the National Museum of Natural History Smithsonian Institution and twenty six additional researchers this book begins with four chapters that lay out the theoretical background and methodology of the science of evolutionary paleoecology Included are a comprehensive review of the taphonomy and paleoenvironmental settings of fossil deposits as well as guidelines for developing ecological characterizations of extinct organisms and the communities in which they lived The remaining three chapters treat the history of terrestrial ecosystems through geological time emphasizing how ecological interactions have changed the rate and tempo of ecosystem change the role of exogenous forcing factors in generating ecological change and the effect of ecological factors on the evolution of biological diversity The six principal authors of this volume are all associated with the Evolution of Terrestrial Ecosystems program at the National Museum of Natural History Smithsonian Institution

Palaeobiology II Derek E. G. Briggs, Peter R. Crowther, 2008-04-15
Palaeobiology A Synthesis was widely acclaimed both for its content and production quality Ten years on Derek Briggs and Peter Crowther have once again brought together over 150 leading authorities from around the world to produce Palaeobiology II Using the same successful formula the content is arranged as a series of concise articles taking a thematic approach to the subject rather than treating the various fossil groups systematically This entirely new book with its diversity of new topics and over 100 new contributors reflects the exciting developments in the field including accounts of spectacular newly discovered fossils and embraces data from other disciplines such as astrobiology geochemistry and genetics Palaeobiology II will be an invaluable resource not only for palaeontologists but also for students and researchers in other branches of the earth and life sciences Written by an international team of recognised authorities in the field Content is concise but informative Demonstrates how palaeobiological studies are at the heart of a range of scientific themes Past

Environments of Mexico Rosalía Guerrero-Arenas, Eduardo Jiménez-Hidalgo, 2024-04-01 Mexico is a biodiverse country The dynamics of environments from Mexico played a crucial role in the history of North American biota This book analyzes the paleoenvironmental conditions using several biological groups and various methods This book also demonstrates how this information is specifically used to elucidate Mexico's past environments and habitats terrestrial freshwater and marine This book fills an existing editorial gap since much of the information is dispersed in several bibliographic sources The authors are active paleontologists in diverse Mexican universities and research centers Their research activities contribute to the knowledge of the Mexican biota through geologic time Pleurocarpous Mosses Angela E. Newton, Raymond S.

Tangney, 2007-04-13 The shift from traditional taxonomic methods to data oriented analytical cladistic methodologies has led to a better understanding of biological processes and more accurate classifications for a wide range of organisms including mosses Pleurocarpous Mosses Systematics and Evolution explores the impact of these methods through recent breakthrough

Adaptive Radiations of Neotropical Primates Marilyn A. Norconk, Alfred L. Rosenberger, Paul A. Garber, 2011-06-28 This collection of 29 papers grew out of a symposium entitled Setting the Future Agenda for Neotropical Primates The symposium was held at the Department of Zoological Research National Zoological Park Washington D C on February 26 27 1994 and was sponsored by the Wenner Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research Smithsonian Institution and Friends of the National Zoo We put the symposium together with two objectives to honor Warren G Kinzey for his contributions to the growing field of platyrrhine studies and to provide researchers who work in the Neotropics with the opportunity to discuss recent developments to identify areas of research that require additional study and especially to help guide the next generation of researchers The symposium provided the opportunity to recognize Warren as a mentor and collaborator to the contribution of the study of platyrrhines Contributions to the book were expanded in order to provide a more comprehensive view of platyrrhine evolution and ecology to emphasize the interdisciplinary nature of many of these studies and to highlight the central role that New World monkeys play in advancing primatology If this volume were to require major revisions after just one more decade of research that would be a fitting testament to Warren's enthusiasm and his drive to continually update the field with new ideas and methods Tributes to Warren and a list of his publications have been published elsewhere Norconk 1994 1996 Rosenberger 1994 1995 The Carboniferous-Permian Transition Spencer G. DiMichele, James E. Barrick, Joerg W. Schneider, Justin A. Spielmann, 2013 History of Insects A.P. Rasnitsyn, Donald L. Quicke, 2007-05-29 This is the first single book to cover the whole of the fossil history of insects so comprehensively The volume embraces subjects from the history of insect palaeontology to the diagnostic features of all insect orders both extant and extinct

Nonadaptive Selection John Damuth, Lev R. Ginzburg, 2025-07-10 The first comprehensive explanation of a widely applicable but underappreciated mechanism of evolution operating at higher levels of organization than the individual In this important treatise ecologists and evolutionary biologists John Damuth and Lev R Ginzburg identify a specific evolutionary process in biology which they call nonadaptive selection The idea is simple but the implications are profound Nonadaptive selection as they use the term is selection among biological entities as is natural selection but is based on the fitness effects of structural properties intrinsic to the entities under selection rather than on interactions between traits and a local shared environment In other words features of systems that evolve by nonadaptive selection do not adapt to local environmental conditions rather this selective process increases the long term stability of the focal systems independent of local conditions Nonadaptive selection may be of particular value in explaining broad persistent patterns in multispecies biological units where adaptive evolution may be weak or poorly defined Examples include Damuth's Law the equivalence of energy use among animal species across a wide range of body sizes the ratio dependent or Arditi Ginzburg predation conjecture the consistency of allometric scaling powers the shortness of trophic chains and the prevalence of certain types of three species trophic structures across ecosystems Damuth and Ginzburg see nonadaptive selection underlying patterns of ecological allometries community structure and species interactions with some implications for macroevolution Moreover they find a surprising relationship between these nonadaptive processes and biological laws They do not advocate the reorientation of any existing research programs but present nonadaptive selection as an additional conceptual framework that may be useful to add to ecology and evolution

Vertebrate Taphonomy R. Lee Lyman, 1994-07-07 Taphonomy studies the transition of organic matter from the biosphere into the geological record It is particularly relevant to zooarchaeologists and paleobiologists who analyse organic remains in the archaeological record in an attempt to reconstruct hominid subsistence patterns and paleoecological conditions In this user friendly encyclopedic reference volume for students and professionals R Lee Lyman a leading researcher in taphonomy reviews the wide range of analytical techniques used to solve particular zooarchaeological problems illustrating these in most cases with appropriate examples He also covers the history of taphonomic research and its philosophical underpinnings Logically organised and clearly written the book is an important update on all previous publications on archaeological faunal remains
