Abstract

In 2008, the State of Utah implemented a 4-day workweek for their employees. This article examines the impact on employees using a postimplementation survey. For employees on the 4-day schedule, there were no significant differences by gender on work–family balance or on the impact of the schedule. However, women did demonstrate slightly more positive attitudes toward the 4-day schedule. Employees with children at home reported lower work–family balance and greater impact of the 4-day schedule. In contrast, no difference in attitudes toward the 4-day schedule was found by age, although work–family balance differed among age groups. There were differences in work–family balance between employees on the 4-day schedule and those on traditional schedules; however, the more substantial factor was whether an employee selected his or her schedule. The current study highlights the importance of engaging employees when making significant organizational changes, such as transitioning from traditional work schedules to alternative schedules.

Out of Time Kadri Täht,Melinda Mills,2015-12-14 This pioneering work aims at understanding the impact of non standard evening night weekend working time on family cohesion meaning parent child interaction partnership quality and divorce or partnership dissolution Out of time the Consequences of Non standard Employment Schedules for Family Cohesion is the first work to treat this important topic in a cross national comparative way by using data from two large comparable surveys The impact of work in non standard schedules on workers can be divided into individual and social consequences Research so far has shown the clear individual effects of these schedules such as increased stress levels and sleeping and physical disorders There is less clarity about social consequences Either no or positive effects of these types of schedules on workers and their families are found or a significant negative impact on the relations between the workers and others especially other members of the family is shown in research results This Brief compares the Netherlands and the United States of America countries that both show a high prevalence of non standard schedule work whereas both operate in very different institutional and welfare regime settings of working time regulation By combining both quantitative and qualitative data the authors are able to provide generalized views of comparative surveys and challenging those generalizations at the same time thus enabling the reader to get a better understanding and more balanced view of the actual relationship between non standard employment schedules and family cohesion
