Archaeology of Households, Kinship, and Social Change Lacey B. Carpenter, Anna Marie Prentiss, 2021-11-25 Archaeology of Households Kinship and Social Change offers new perspectives on the processes of social change from the standpoint of household archaeology This volume develops new theoretical and methodological approaches to the archaeology of households pursuing three critical themes household diversity in human residential communities with and without archaeologically identifiable houses interactions within and between households that explicitly considers impacts of kin and non kin relationships and lastly change as a process that involves the choices made by members of households in the context of larger societal constraints Encompassing these themes authors explore the role of social ties and their material manifestations within the house dwelling or other constructed space how the household relates to other social units how households consolidate power and control over resources and how these changes manifest at multiple scales The case studies presented in this volume have broader implications for understanding the drivers of change the ways households create the contexts for change and how households serve as spaces for invention reaction and or resistance Understanding the nature of relationships within households is necessary for a more complete understanding of communities and regions as these ties are vital to explaining how and why societies change Taking a comparative outlook with case studies from around the world this volume will inform students and professionals researching household archaeology and be of interest to other disciplines concerned with the relationship between social networks and societal change Materiality and Organizing Paul M. Leonardi, Bonnie A. Nardi, Jannis Kallinikos, 2012-11-22 Ask a person on the street whether new technologies bring about important social change and you are likely to hear a resounding yes But the answer is less definitive amongst academics who study technology and social practice Scholarly writing has been heavily influenced by the ideology of technological determinism the belief that some types or technologically driven social changes are inevitable and cannot be stopped Rather than argue for or against notions of determinism the authors in this book ask how the materiality the arrangement of physical digital or rhetorical materials into particular forms that endure across differences in place and time of technologies ranging from computer simulation tools and social media to ranking devices and rumours is actually implicated in the process of formal and informal organizing The book builds a new theoretical framework to consider the important socio technical changes confronting people s everyday experiences in and outside of work Leading scholars in the field contribute original chapters examining the complex interactions between technology and the social between artefact and humans The discussion spans multiple disciplines including management information systems informatics communication sociology and the history of technology and opens up a new area of research regarding the relationship between materiality and organizing
