Haulin' Rope & Gaff Shannon Ryan, Larry Small, 1978. Men and boys of Newfoundland's north East Coast always looked forward to the coming of March. It was sealing or swilin' time. Seal meat would give some reprieve to the long and hungry month of March, by which time the family food store was very low. At this time of the year, sealing provided the only opportunity to obtain fresh meat and the pelts brought long-awaited cash. Shannon Ryan was born and bred in Riverhead Harbor, Grace, the one-time home of the great sealing industry. He attended secondary school in his home community and later received an education degree from Memorial University. After spending several years teaching in Newfoundland, he taught for two years at Ranking Inlet in North West Territories. In the late 1960s, he returned to university and later obtained a M.A. in history at Memorial University. He has done extensive research on the Newfoundland seal and cod fisheries and has spent one summer doing fisheries research in Norway. Larry Small was born and reared in Morton's Harbor, Notre-Damme Bay. He killed his first whitecoat at the age of fifteen; the gaff was a dogwood selected from the woods by his father and the hook crafted by the community blacksmith. He attended the one-room Methodist school in Morton's Harbor and later took up studies at Memorial University. During his B.A. at Memorial, he came under the influence of the internationally known scholar Herbert Halpert, who inspired him to study for an M.A. degree in folklore and folklife at the University of Pennsylvania. All of his field research has been in Newfoundland outporting communities where he has done extensive work on various aspects of life among fishermen. Since 1974, he has been teaching in the department of Folklore at Memorial University.
