Prins, Wiebke Thormahlen, 2018-12-07 In recent decades the relationship between music emotions health and well being has become a hot topic Scientific research and new neuro imaging technologies have provided extraordinary new insights into how music affects our brains and bodies and researchers in fields ranging from psychology and music therapy to history and sociology have turned their attention to the question of how music relates to mind body feelings and health generating a wealth of insights as well as new challenges Yet this work is often divided by discipline and methodology resulting in parallel yet separate discourses In this context The Routledge Companion to Music Mind and Well being seeks to foster truly interdisciplinary approaches to key questions about the nature of musical experience and to demonstrate the importance of the conceptual and ideological frameworks underlying research in this field Incorporating perspectives from musicology history psychology neuroscience music education philosophy sociology linguistics and music therapy this volume opens the way for a generative dialogue across both scientific and humanistic scholarship The Companion is divided into two sections The chapters in the first historical section consider the varied ways in which music the emotions well being and their interactions have been understood in the past from Antiquity to the twentieth century shedding light on the intellectual origins of debates that continue today The chapters in the second contemporary section offer a variety of current scientific perspectives on these topics and engage wider philosophical problems The Companion ends with chapters that explore the practical application of music in healthcare education and welfare drawing on work on music as a social and ecological phenomenon Contextualising contemporary scientific research on music within the history of ideas this volume provides a unique overview of what it means to study music in relation to the mind and well being

The Pleasure of Modernist Music
Arved Mark Ashby, 2004 The debate over modernist music has continued for almost a century from Berg's Wozzeck and Webern's Symphony Op 21 to John Cage's renegotiation of musical control the unusual musical practices of the Velvet Underground and Stanley Kubrick's use of Ligeti's Lux Aeterna in the epic film 2001 The composers discussed in these pages including Bartók Stockhausen Bernard Herrmann Steve Reich and many others are modernists in that they are defined by their individualism whether covert or overt and share a basic urge toward redesigning musical discourse The aim of this volume is to negotiate a varied and open middle ground between polemical extremes of reception The contributors sketch out the possible significance of a repertory that in past discussions has been deemed either meaningless or beyond describable meaning With an emphasis on recent aesthetics and contexts including film music sexuality metaphor and ideas of a listening grammar they trace the meanings that such works and composers have held for listeners of different kinds None of them takes up the usual mandate of educated listening to modernist works the notion that a person can appreciate difficult music if given enough time and schooling Instead the book defines novel but meaningful avenues of significance for modernist music avenues beyond those deemed appropriate or acceptable by the academy While some contributors offer new listening strategies most interpret the listening premise more loosely as a metaphor for any manner of personal and immediate connection with music In addition to a previously untranslated article by Pierre Boulez the volume contains articles all but one previously unpublished by twelve distinctive and prominent composers music critics and music theorists from America Europe Australia and South Africa Arved Ashby Amy Bauer William Bolcom Jonathan Bernard Judy Lochhead Fred Maus Andrew Mead Greg Sandow Martin Scherzinger Jeremy Tambling Richard Toop and Lloyd Whitesell Arved Ashby is Associate Professor of Music at the Ohio State University

A Guide for the Teaching of Music Literature Kit Elaine Johnson, 1960

Learning to Listen, Listening to Learn Marcus T. Pearce, 2025-05-22 What accounts for the variety of music witnessed across the world The answer lies in the psychological mechanisms of cultural evolution that combine a creative process of composing ever new forms of music and a perceptual process of learning to appreciate listening to them This book develops and tests a theory of the psychological mechanisms that enable listeners to learn the structure of their culturally situated musical environments so as to be able to perceive and appreciate music The central hypothesis is that music perception depends critically on mechanisms of statistical learning and probabilistic prediction These mechanisms are implemented in a computational model whose behaviour is analysed in detail through simulations of psychological experiments The results demonstrate that the model can account for predictions generated by listeners for the pitch timing and harmonies of music While prediction is an important psychological mechanism in and of itself the evidence presented shows how it also lays the foundation for a broader account of music perception encompassing memory auditory scene analysis similarity perception complexity perception affect and aesthetic experience The proposed theory makes concrete predictions for differences in perception between listeners from different cultures and the developmental trajectories that result in these differences These predictions are tested and corroborated with respect to both the incidental cultural experience of non musicians and the formal cultural training of musicians Because the approach rests fundamentally on mechanisms of statistical learning it generalises naturally to other cultural domains including natural
