

Analysis of the European Commission Strategic Framework for International Cooperation

December 2024

INTRODUCTION

Reducing global deforestation and supporting a transition to sustainable agriculture requires changes to the underlying conditions that enable agriculture-linked deforestation.

The EU Regulation on deforestation-free products (EUDR) aims to minimise “the Union’s contribution to deforestation, forest degradation worldwide” by removing products tainted by deforestation from EU supply chains. This is an important part of the puzzle but will not deliver the systemic changes needed to address deforestation.

In addition, there is a high risk that while EU supply chains may become deforestation-free, products associated with deforestation are sold to other markets, a phenomenon known as leakage. There are also concerns that smallholders will either bear the cost of implementing the Regulation or be excluded. Real partnerships between the EU and producer countries are needed to address these risks and tackle the root causes of deforestation.

On 2 October 2024, the Commission presented the Strategic Framework for International Cooperation. This briefing looks at what it says about partnerships, improving governance, avoiding leakage and supporting smallholders; what existing and future partnerships are envisaged and how they will create a level playing field. Table 1 outlines the countries most linked to agricultural deforestation and therefore most likely to be affected by the EUDR.
