

The Renaissance 15th and 16th Centuries:

A Turning Point in European History and Exploration

The Renaissance was a time of great change and creativity, with new ideas emerging in many different fields.

In the arts, the Renaissance saw a renewed interest in classical styles, in realism and proportion. Artists such as Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, and Raphael created masterpieces that are still widely regarded as some of history's greatest works of art. The Renaissance also saw the birth of the modern scientific method, with individuals such as Galileo Galilei and Nicolaus Copernicus making significant contributions to our understanding of the natural world.

In philosophy, the Renaissance was marked by a greater emphasis on individualism and human potential. Thinkers such as Niccolò Machiavelli, Thomas Hobbes, and William Shakespeare explored the nature of humanity and the individual's role in society.

In addition to these cultural and intellectual achievements, the Renaissance primarily inspired global exploration and trade. The creation of the modern compass and advances in shipbuilding increased sea voyages and the discovery of new continents, including the Americas. This paved the way for the colonization of the Americas and the establishment of trade routes between Europe and Asia.

During the Renaissance, there were many notable explorers who made significant contributions to our understanding of the world. This includes Vasco da Gama, a Portuguese explorer who was the first person to sail from Europe to India via the Cape of Good Hope. His voyage marked the beginning of European dominance in the Indian Ocean trade.

Overall, the Renaissance was a key turning point in European history that laid the foundation for modern society in the Western world's cultural, intellectual, and political landscape.

particular In this thought provoking and original book George Saliba argues that contrary to the generally accepted view the foundations of Islamic scientific thought were laid well before Greek sources were formally translated into Arabic in the ninth century Drawing on an account by the tenth century intellectual historian Ibn al Naidm that is ignored by most modern scholars Saliba suggests that early translations from mainly Persian and Greek sources outlining elementary scientific ideas for the use of government departments were the impetus for the development of the Islamic scientific tradition He argues further that there was an organic relationship between the Islamic scientific thought that developed in the later centuries and the science that came into being in Europe during the Renaissance Saliba outlines the conventional accounts of Islamic science then discusses their shortcomings and proposes an alternate narrative Using astronomy as a template for tracing the progress of science in Islamic civilization Saliba demonstrates the originality of Islamic scientific thought He details the innovations including new mathematical tools made by the Islamic astronomers from the thirteenth to sixteenth centuries and offers evidence that Copernicus could have known of and drawn on their work Rather than viewing the rise and fall of Islamic science from the often narrated perspectives of politics and religion Saliba focuses on the scientific production itself and the complex social economic and intellectual conditions that made it possible Science and Civilisation in China Joseph Needham,Wang Ling,Gwei-Djen Lu,1971 Publications of the Teaching Staff ,1911 Publications of the Teaching Staff Ohio State University,1908 Ohio State University Bulletin ,1911 Latin Scientific Literature, 1450-1850 Martin Korenjak,2023-09-20 During the early modern period the emergence of what ultimately became modern science took place mainly in Latin the international language of educated discourse of the era Hundreds of thousands of scientific texts were published in Latin from the invention of print around 1450 to the demise of Latin as a language of science around 1850 Despite its importance our knowledge of this literature is extremely limited This book aims to provide an overview of this area the first ever to be written It does so not from the perspective of a natural scientist or a historian of science but of a literary scholar Instead of the scientific content or methodology of the respective works it focusses on the genres of scientific literature and their communicative functions Latin Scientific Literature 1450 1850 falls into two main parts The first part Contexts introduces four aspects of early modern intellectual culture which are crucial for an understanding of the scientific literature of the time the development of science the role of Latin the concept of literature and the rise of print Part two Texts offers an overview of Neo Latin scientific literature Subsumed under five communicative functions disclosing sources presenting facts arguing for certain positions summarizing knowledge and publicizing science twenty pertinent genres are discussed Britain and its Neighbours Dirk H. A Culture of Growth Joel Mokyr,2018-06-12 Why Enlightenment culture sparked the Industrial Revolution During the late eighteenth century innovations in Europe triggered the Industrial Revolution and the sustained economic progress that spread across the globe While much has been made of the details of the Industrial Revolution what remains a mystery is why it took place at all Why did this revolution begin in the West and not elsewhere and why did it continue leading to today s unprecedented prosperity In this groundbreaking book celebrated economic historian Joel Mokyr argues that a culture of growth specific to early modern Europe and the European

Enlightenment laid the foundations for the scientific advances and pioneering inventions that would instigate explosive technological and economic development Bringing together economics the history of science and technology and models of cultural evolution Mokyr demonstrates that culture the beliefs values and preferences in society that are capable of changing behavior was a deciding factor in societal transformations Mokyr looks at the period 1500 1700 to show that a politically fragmented Europe fostered a competitive market for ideas and a willingness to investigate the secrets of nature At the same time a transnational community of brilliant thinkers known as the Republic of Letters freely circulated and distributed ideas and writings This political fragmentation and the supportive intellectual environment explain how the Industrial Revolution happened in Europe but not China despite similar levels of technology and intellectual activity In Europe heterodox and creative thinkers could find sanctuary in other countries and spread their thinking across borders In contrast China s version of the Enlightenment remained controlled by the ruling elite Combining ideas from economics and cultural evolution A Culture of Growth provides startling reasons for why the foundations of our modern economy were laid in the mere two centuries between Columbus and Newton
