The Evolution Of Settlement In Three Parishes In Southeast Norfolk:

The Evolution of Settlement in Three Parishes in South-East Norfolk Alan Davison, 1990 A sequence of settlement patterns from prehistoric to late medieval and early post medieval times has been established through fieldwalking in three parishes Loddon Hales and Heckingham The documentary evidence has also been reviewed In all periods settlement favoured the areas of lighter soils though much of the landscape of all three parishes appears to have been exploited Fluctuations and changes in the density and distribution of settlement over the centuries are described and analysed A Life in Norfolk's Archaeology: 1950-2016 Peter Wade-Martins, 2017-11-03 A personal history of Peter Wade Martins archaeological endeavour in Norfolk set within a national context It covers the writer s early experiences as a volunteer the rise of field archaeology as a profession and efforts to conserve archaeological heritage

The Archaeology of the East Anglian Conversion Richard Hoggett, 2010 The huge changes in the landscape as a result of the Christian conversion of East Anglia are examined in this multi disciplinary study The conversion to Christianity of the Anglo Saxon kingdom of East Anglia left huge marks on the area both metaphorical and literal Drawing on both the surviving documentary sources and on the eastern region s rich archaeological record this book presents the first multi disciplinary synthesis of the process It begins with an analysis of the historical framework followed by an examination of the archaeological evidence for the establishment of missionary stations within the region s ruinous Roman forts and earthwork enclosures It argues that the effectiveness of the Christian mission is clearly visible in the region s burial record which exhibits a number of significant changes including the cessation of cremation The conversion can also be seen in the dramatic upheavals which occurred in the East Anglian landscape including changes in the relationship between settlements and cemeteries and the foundation of a number of different types of Christian cemetery Ultimately it shows that far from being the preserve of kings the East Anglian conversion was widespread at a grassroots level changing the nature of the Anglo Saxon landscape forever Dr RICHARD HOGGETT is currently Coastal Heritage Officer with Norfolk County Council

The Evolution of Settlement in Three Parishes in South-east Norfolk Alan Davidson, 1990

The Norfolk Broads Tom Williamson, 1997 Describing how the diverse environments of Broadland were first shaped in the Middle Ages this book explains how they were constantly modified in succeeding centuries by changing forms of economy and by changing patterns of social organisation William Faden and Norfolk's Eighteenth Century Landscape Andrew Macnair, Tom Williamson, 2010-08-24 William Faden s map of Norfolk published in 1797 was one of a large number of surveys of English counties produced in the second half of the eighteenth century This book with accompanying DVD presents a new digital version of the map and explains how this can be interrogated to produce a wealth of new historical information It discusses the making of the Norfolk map and Faden s own career within the wider context of the eighteenth century cartographic revolution It explores what the map and others like it can tell us about contemporary social and economic geography But it also shows how carefully examined the map can also inform us about the development of the Norfolk landscape in much more remote periods of time The book includes a digital version of the map on DVD Andrew Macnair is Research Fellow at the School of History in the University of East Anglia Tom Williamson is Professor of History and Head of the Landscape Group at the University of East Anglia Reflections: 50 Years of Medieval Archaeology, 1957-2007: No. 30 Roberta Gilchrist, Andrew Reynolds, 2018-12-13 This volume celebrates the 50th anniversary of the Society for Medieval Archaeology established in 1957 presenting reflections on the history development and future prospects of the discipline The papers are drawn from a series of conferences and workshops that took place in 2007 08 in addition to a number of contributions that were commissioned especially for the volume They range from personal commentaries on the history of the Society and the growth of the subject see papers by David Wilson and Rosemary Cramp to historiographical regional and thematic overviews of major trends in the evolution and current practice of medieval archaeology All the publications are fully refereed with the aim of publishing at the highest academic level reports on sites of national and international importance and of encouraging the widest debate The series objectives are to cover the broadest chronological and geographical range and to assemble a series of volumes which reflect the changing intellectual and technical scope of the discipline The Archaeology of Medieval Villages Currently Inhabited in Europe Jesús Fernández Fernández, Margarita Fernández Mier, 2019-08-29 Archaeological interventions in European rural settlements have largely focussed on villages abandoned during the last millennium Most hamlets and villages of medieval origin remain inhabited however and excavations have been scarce This book details excavations of inhabited sites in the UK the Netherlands France Scandinavia and Spain Middle Saxon' Settlement and Society: The Changing Rural Communities of Central and Eastern England Duncan Wright, 2015-05-31 This book explores the experiences of rural communities who lived between the seventh and ninth centuries in central and eastern England Combining archaeology with documentary place name and topographic evidences it provides unique insight into social economic and political conditions in Middle Saxon England Environment, Society and Landscape in Early Medieval England Tom Williamson, 2015 The origins of England s regional cultures are here shown to be strongly influenced by the natural environment and geographical features The Anglo Saxon period was crucial in the development of England s character its language and much of its landscape and culture were forged in the period between the fifth and the eleventh centuries Historians and archaeologists have long been fascinated by its regional variations by the way in which different parts of the country displayed marked differences in social structures settlement patterns and field systems In this controversial and wide ranging study the author argues that such differences were largely a consequence of environmental factors of the influence of climate soils and hydrology and of the patterns of contact and communication engendered by natural topography He also suggests that such environmental influences have been neglected over recent decades by generations of scholars who are embedded in an urban culture and largely divorced from the natural world and that an appreciation of the fundamental role of physical geography in shaping human affairs can throw much new light on a number of important debates about early medieval society The book will be essential reading for all those interested in the character of the Anglo Saxon and Scandinavian settlements in early medieval social and territorial organization and in the origins of the England's medieval landscapes Tom Williamson is Professor of Landscape History University of East Anglia he has written widely on landscape archaeology agricultural history and the history of landscape design

The Archaeology of the 11th Century Dawn M Hadley, Christopher Dyer, 2017-02-10 The Archaeology of the 11th Century explores this formative period of English history and in particular the impact of the Conquest of England by the Normans The volume examines how the Normans contributed to local culture religion and society through a range of topics including food culture funerary practices the development of castles and their impact and how both urban and rural life evolved during the eleventh century Through its nuanced approach to the complex relationships and regional identities which characterized the period this collection stimulates renewed debate and challenges some of the long standing myths surrounding the Conquest

The Oxford Handbook of Anglo-Saxon Archaeology Helena Hamerow, David A. Hinton, Sally Crawford, 2011-03-31 Written by a team of experts and presenting the results of the most up to date research The Handbook of Anglo Saxon Archaeology will both stimulate and support further investigation into a society poised at the interface between prehistory and history

The Shapwick Project, Somerset Christopher Gerrard, 2017-10-24 This book provides an introduction to the Shapwick Project's objectives geographical background and previous work in the Somerset It deals with excavations in the outlying parish and focuses on work in the village at Shapwick House

Kingdom, Civitas, and County Stephen Rippon, 2018 This book explores the development of territorial identity in the late prehistoric Roman and early medieval periods Over the course of the Iron Age a series of marked regional variations in material culture and landscape character emerged across eastern England that reflect the development of discrete zones of social and economic interaction The boundaries between these zones appear to have run through sparsely settled areas of the landscape on high ground and corresponded to a series of kingdoms that emerged during the Late Iron Age In eastern England at least these pre Roman socio economic territories appear to have survived throughout the Roman period despite a trend towards cultural homogenization brought about by Romanization Although there is no direct evidence for the relationship between these socio economic zones and the Roman administrative territories known as civitates they probably corresponded very closely The fifth century saw some Anglo Saxon immigration but whereas in East Anglia these communities spread out across much of the landscape in the Northern Thames Basin they appear to have been restricted to certain coastal and estuarine districts The remaining areas continued to be occupied by a substantial native British population including much of the East Saxon kingdom very little of which appears to have been Saxon By the sixth century a series of regionally distinct identities that can be regarded as separate ethnic groups had developed which corresponded very closely to those that had emerged during the late prehistoric and Roman periods These ancient regional identities survived through to the Viking incursions whereafter they were swept away following the English re conquest and replaced with the counties with which we are familiar today

Tradition and Transformation in Anglo-Saxon England Susan Oosthuizen, 2013-05-09 Most people believe that traditional landscapes did not survive the collapse of Roman Britain and that medieval open fields and commons originated in Anglo Saxon innovations unsullied by the past The argument presented here tests that belief by contrasting the form and management of early medieval fields and pastures with those of the prehistoric and Roman landscapes they are supposed to have superseded The comparison reveals unexpected continuities in the layout and management of arable and pasture from the fourth millennium BC to the Norman Conquest The results suggest a new paradigm the collective organisation of agricultural resources originated many centuries perhaps millennia before Germanic migrants reached Britain In many places medieval open fields and common rights over pasture preserved long standing traditions for organising community assets In central southern England a negotiated compromise between early medieval lords eager to introduce new managerial structures and communities as keen to retain their customary traditions of landscape organisation underpinned the emergence of nucleated settlements and distinctive highly regulated open fields

The Landscape Archaeology of Anglo-Saxon England N. J. Higham, Martin J. Ryan, 2010 The Anglo Saxon period was crucial to the development of the English landscape but is rarely studied The essays here provide radical new interpretations of its development Traditional opinion has perceived the Anglo Saxons as creating an entirely new landscape from scratch in the fifth and sixth centuries AD cutting down woodland and bringing with them the practice of open field agriculture and establishing villages Whilst recent scholarship has proved this simplistic picture wanting it has also raised many questions about the nature of landscape development at the time the changing nature of systems of land management and strategies for settlement The papers here seek to shed new light on these complex issues Taking a variety of different approaches and with topics ranging from the impact of coppicing to medieval field systems from the representation of the landscape in manuscripts to cereal production and the type of bread the population preferred they offer striking new approaches to the central issues of landscape change across the seven centuries of Anglo Saxon England a period surely foundational to the rural landscape of today

NICHOLAS J HIGHAM is Professor of Early Medieval and Landscape History at the University of Manchester MARTIN J RYAN lectures in Medieval History at the University of Manchester Contributors Nicholas J Higham Christopher Grocock Stephen Rippon Stuart Brookes Carenza Lewis Susan Oosthuizen Tom Williamson Catherine Karkov David Hill Debby Banham Richard Hoggett Peter Murphy

The Ancient Ways of Wessex Alexander Langlands, 2019-11-30 The Ancient Ways of Wessex tells the story of Wessex's roads in the early medieval period at the point at which they first emerge in the historical record This is the age of the Anglo Saxons and an era that witnessed the rise of a kingdom that was taken to the very brink of defeat by the Viking invasions of the ninth century It is a period that goes on to become one within which we can trace the beginnings of the political entity we have come to know today as England In a series of ten detailed case studies the reader is invited to consider historical and archaeological evidence alongside topographic information and ancient place names in the reconstruction of the networks of routeways and communications that served the people and places of the Anglo Saxon kingdom of Wessex Whether you were a peasant pilgrim drover trader warrior bishop king or queen travel would have been fundamental to life in the early middle ages and this book explores the physical means by which the landscape was constituted to facilitate and improve the movement of people goods and ideas from the seventh through to the eleventh centuries What emerges is a dynamic web of interconnecting routeways serving multiple functions and one perhaps even busier than that in our own working countryside A narrative of transition one of both of continuity and change provides a fresh and alternative window into the everyday workings of an early medieval landscape through the pathways trodden over a millennium ago

Medieval East Anglia Christopher Harper-Bill, 2005 Medieval East Anglia one of the most significant and prosperous parts of England in the middle ages examined through essays on its landscape history religion literature and culture East Anglia was the most prosperous region of medieval England far from being an isolated backwater it had strong economic religious and cultural connections with continental Europe with Norwich for a time England's second city The essays in this volume bring out the importance of the region during the middle ages Spanning the late eleventh to the fifteenth century they offer a broad coverage of East Anglia's history and culture particular topics examined include its landscape urban history buildings government and society religion and rich culture Contributors Christopher Harper Bill Tom Williamson Robert E Liddiard P Maddern Brian Ayers Elisabeth Rutledge Penny Dunn Kate Parker Carole Rawcliffe James Campbell Lucy Marten Colin Richmond T M Colk Carole Hill T A Heslop A E Oliver Theresa Coletti Penny Granger Sarah Salih

Hedgerow History Gerry Barnes, Tom Williamson, 2008-01-01 Oxbow says For many years hedges have been the most common field boundary in rural Britain providing a stock proof barrier a field boundary and a haven for wildlife Despite this they are rarely studied in any detail in landscape archaeology The authors of Hedgerow History rightly argue that hedges as an essential feature of the landscape their origins and development are as worthy of study as any other part of the landscape Their book focuses on the species content and diversity of hedges how these came about and how they changed over time The introduction provides the background to hedges in Britain the development of field boundaries changes in fields and farming especially the impact of enclosure hedgerow management and methods of dating hedges In an attempt to evaluate the pioneering work of Hooper and Pollard in the 1960s and 1970s and gain insights into the diversity of hedges and the possible human and animal reasons for it Barnes and Williamson carried out a detailed survey of hedgerows in Norfolk Finding 61 shrub species among the Norfolk hedgerows they attempt to tie this data in with evidence on geology soils climate woodland enclosure farming practices and historical factors as an indicator of the processes of continuity and change that have taken place in the wider landscape

the first book to explore how far the countryside of Roman Britain has survived in use through to the present day shaping the character of our modern countryside
