Behringer,Brian R. Silliman,Kevin D. Lafferty,2020-01-30 Whether through loss of habitat or cascading community effects diseases can shape the very nature of the marine environment Despite their significant impacts studies of marine diseases have tended to lag behind their terrestrial equivalents particularly with regards to their ecological effects However in recent decades global research focused on marine disease ecology has expanded at an accelerating rate This is due in part to increases in disease emergence across many taxa but can also be attributed to a broader realization that the parasites responsible for disease are themselves important members of marine communities Understanding their ecological relationships with the environment and their hosts is critical to understanding conserving and managing natural and exploited populations communities and ecosystems Courses on marine disease ecology are now starting to emerge and this first textbook in the field will be ideally placed to serve them Marine Disease Ecology is suitable for graduate students and researchers in the fields of marine disease ecology aquaculture fisheries veterinary science evolution and conservation It will also be of relevance and use to a broader interdisciplinary audience of government agencies NGOs and marine resource managers

Ecosystem-Based Fisheries Management Jason S. Link,Anthony R. Marshak,2021-11-15 Ecosystem based fishery management EBFM is rapidly becoming the default approach in global fisheries management The clarity of what EBFM means is sharpening each year and there is now a real need to evaluate progress and assess the effectiveness and impacts By examining a suite of over 90 indicators including socioeconomic governance environmental forcing major pressures systems ecology and fisheries criteria for 9 major US fishery ecosystem jurisdictions the authors systematically track the progress the country has made towards advancing EBFM and making it an operational reality The assessment covers a wide range of data in both time multiple decades and space from the tropics to the poles representing over 10% of the world s ocean surface area The authors view progress towards the implementation of EBFM as synonymous with improved management of living marine resources in general and highlight the findings from a national perspective Although US centric the lessons learned are directly applicable for all parts of the global ocean Much work remains but significant progress has already been made to better address many of the challenges facing the sustainable management of our living marine resources This is an essential and accessible reference for all fisheries professionals who are currently practicing or progressing towards ecosystem based fisheries management It will also be of relevance and use to researchers teachers managers and graduate students in marine ecology fisheries biology biological oceanography global change biology conservation biology and marine resource management
