Abstract

Eco materiality is a new materialist paradigm arising from the convergence of cultural discourses and radical processes. It stems from a spatial discourse theory of man and the nature of the human context story telling beyond and associated on some anthropocentric readings and ideologies that have greatly failed to address timely human challenges. Eco materialism provides an (inter)weaving of weaving matter that enables study of materialistic, nonanthropocentric and such other binary oppositions like materialism/superstition of meanings. It interrogates the notion of matter (storied matter) and affirms its contextualization of reality and its intermingling as a worthy material - storied matter. In eco materialism, matter, humans as one of meaning, a tale of reality and a platform of expression. Eco materialism affords a deanthropocentric reading of texts across all matters - objects, materials, nature, gender and humans are seen against references interrelating in an ever unfolding meaning. As a new signifying dimension of storied expression, it develops varied and interweaving theories in developing storied matter. It is a new addition in the growing study of eco materialism that requires us to return to the narrations of matter. For humans need learn to listen to other species besides with which he occupies the world. More should learn that in these storied matters are deep ecological meanings of environmental, cultural, political and social dimensions. Natural materials that could save the world. Egunu Okunola is a major poet who whose works have won laurels in Nigeria and overseas. A Good Morning (2016) is the poet's latest work in an established tradition of eco pragmatism within the theme of the work. Eco materialism which is the lens from which Egunu Okunola's A Good Morning (2016) shall be studied to assess the complexity of matter, narrativity, and meaning. The study among other things, shall illustrate how storied matter is symptomatic of wider meanings that the poet tries to convey in some of the poems in the collection. This is sure to be seen further consequences in the storied matter.

Keywords: Eco materiality, cultural discourses, radical processes, anthropocentric, non culture, gender, species references, storied matter, humans, nature, material agencies, narrations and environmental dimensions.

INTRODUCTION

The world, for long has privileged the culture and ideas that perceive humans as being the centre of the universe. This perception has led to a human-centred or anthropocentric view of the world and the environment is considered only in human service. This mode of thinking encourages the degradation of the Water David Soll, 2013-03-26 Supplying water to millions is not simply an engineering and logistical challenge. As David Soll shows in his finely observed history of the nation's largest municipal water system, the task of providing water to New Yorkers transformed the natural and built environment of the city, its suburbs, and distant rural watersheds. Almost as soon as New York City completed its first municipal water system in 1842, it began to expand the network, eventually reaching far into the Catskill Mountains, more than one hundred miles from the city. Empire of Water explores the history of New York City's water system from the late nineteenth century to the early twenty-first century, focusing on the geographical, environmental, and political repercussions of the city's search for more water. Soll vividly recounts the profound environmental implications for both city and countryside. Some of the region's most prominent landmarks, such as the High Bridge across the Harlem River, Central Park's Great Lawn, and the Ashokan Reservoir in Ulster County, have their origins in the city's water system. By tracing the evolution of the city's water conservation efforts and watershed management regime, Soll reveals the tremendous shifts in environmental practices and consciousness that occurred during the twentieth century. Few episodes better capture the long-standing upstate-downstate divide in New York than the story of how mountain water came to flow from spigots in Brooklyn and Manhattan. Soll concludes by focusing on the landmark watershed protection agreement signed in 1997 between the city, watershed residents, environmental organizations, and the state and federal governments. After decades of rancor between the city and Catskill residents, the two sides set aside their differences to forge a new model of environmental stewardship. His account of this unlikely environmental success story offers a behind-the-scenes perspective on the nation's most ambitious and wide-ranging watershed protection program.
