Dunaway, 2003 Wilma Dunaway breaks new ground by focusing on slave experiences on small plantations in the Upper South She argues that a region was not buffered from the political economic and social impacts of enslavement simply because it was characterized by low black population density and small slaveholdings By drawing on a massive statistical data base derived from antebellum census manuscripts and county tax records of 215 counties in nine states on a vast array slaveholder manuscripts and on regional slave narratives she pinpoints several indicators that distinguished Mountain South enslavement from the Lower South

Elderly Slaves of the Plantation South Stacey K. Close, 2015-12-22 Elderly slaves contributed substantially to the creation and perpetuation of the unique African American culture and antebellum plantation society in the South Interwoven with this major argument are two subthemes One centers on the fact that by the late antebellum period elderly slaves were some of the chief transmitters of Africanism the other focuses on how gender based distinctions of the elderly became blurred Although the roles of the elderly often changed elderly slaves contributed to the plantation economy It is also true that those old people who were incapacitated posed serious economic and social concerns for owners although many of the problems of elderly care were solved by the compassion of slave community members Ph D Dissertation The Ohio State University 1992 revised with new preface and index
