

STOCK SELLING RULES

for Maximizing Profits

PROTECT AGAINST BIG LOSSES

Use SELL RULES to keep your emotions in check.

LOCK IN YOUR PROFITS

The 8% Rule

Limit any loss on a position to 8%. Cutting losses short keeps you out of the pride trap: "I know I picked a good company—it'll come back." Or the hope trap: "I hope it will come back so I can sell it and break even."

Watching the Detectives

Sell when you see signs that institutional investors, who were previously boosting the stock's price, are unloading shares: a stock's price falling on above-average volume, making new highs on low volume, repeatedly reversing off highs and/or closing near intraday lows, or breaking logical areas of support like moving averages and uptrend lines.

Take Profits at 20%

Sell most stocks when they are up 20-25%. Most leading growth stocks tend to rise 20-25% before slowing down and going sideways/down in price. The best time to sell a position is when it's still going up. Don't wait for the fundamentals of the company to deteriorate, because they usually look best at the top.

Don't Double Down

Some investors will actually buy more of a losing position instead of following proper sell rules. Continuing to add shares as a stock's price is falling can lead to disastrous results.

Get instant alerts if your stock triggers the 8% Down or 20-25% Up sell rules using MarketSmith.
Here's how to do it.
