Relational Processes and DSM-V Steven R. Beach, Marianne Z. Wamboldt, Nadine J. Kaslow, Richard E. Heyman, Michael B. First, Lynn G. Underwood, David Reiss, 2007-05-03 Seeking to integrate the large volume of clinical research on relational processes and mental health disorders with other scientific advances in psychiatry Relational Processes and DSM V builds on exciting advances in clinical research on troubled relationships These advances included marked improvements in the assessment and epidemiology of troubled relationships as well the use of genetics neuroscience and immunology to explore the importance of close relationships in clinical practice Advances in family based intervention and prevention are also highlighted to help practitioners and researchers find common ground and begin an empirically based discussion about the best way to revise the DSM Given the overwhelming research showing that relationships play a role in regulating neurobiology and genetic expression and are critical for understanding schizophrenia conduct disorder and depression among other disorders relational processes must be a part of any empirically based plan for revising psychiatric nosology in DSM V The chapters in this book counter the perspective that we can safely discard the biopsychosocial model that has guided psychiatry in the past The contributors examine the relevance of close relationships in such issues as the basic psychopathology of mental disorders factors influencing maintenance and relapse sources of burden for family members and guiding family based interventions By tying relational processes to basic research on psychopathology they demonstrate the value of integrating basic behavioral and brain research with a sophisticated understanding of the self organizing and self sustaining characteristics of relationships Coverage includes research linking relational processes to neuroscience neurobiology health outcomes intervention research prevention research and genetics consideration of specific circumstances such as promoting healthy parenting following divorce and relational processes in depressed Latino adolescents optimal approaches to the assessment of relational processes with clinical significance such as child abuse partner abuse and expressed emotion a simple introduction to the methodology of taxometrics offering insight into whether key relational processes are distinct categories or continuously distributed variables an overview of the links between relational processes and psychiatric outcomes providing a theoretical foundation for the discussion of links to psychopathology Together these contributions seek to develop a shared commitment among clinicians researchers and psychopathologists to take seriously the issue of relational processes as they relate to diagnoses within DSM and to

Ammerman,Michel Hersen,2013-11-11 This book could not have been conceptualized or published 20 years ago Indeed it is doubtful that we could have organized the material for this handbook 10 years ago Over the last 20 years however the painstaking efforts of many clinical researchers working with a variety of resistive psychopathologies have resulted in specific psychotherapies and pharmacotherapies that are effective with a significant proportion of patients at least for some of the disorders Much clinical research remains to be carried out in the forthcoming decades But now that we are nearing the 21st century at least some statement about efficacy can be made In 1967 Gordon Paul succinctly stated that the ultimate goal of treatment outcome research is to determine What treatment by whom is most effective for this individual with that specific problem and under which set of circumstances p 111 At that time empirical evaluations of psychosocial and pharmacologic treatments were few and far between Methodological strategies for determining treatment effectiveness were also in the formative stage as exemplified by introduction of control groups that received inactive interventions i e placebo and the relatively recent practice of comparing two or more treatments in addition to placebo In the almost three decades since Paul's oft quoted dictum both the quantity and the quality of treatment outcome research with adults have increased dramatically work that are in vogue at any particular time Most of the stories relate to phantom limbs and date from the mid 1800s The typical story goes like this A man who had his leg amputated complained about terrible crawling twitching feelings in his leg His friends found out where the leg was buried dug it up and found maggots eating it They burned it and the pain stopped Another man complained of a swollen feeling with frequent stinging or biting pains
