Abstract: The global health architecture is more extensive but very complex. The boundaries of public health are now integrating with other sectors. Now a day's globalization and urbanization are playing the key roles. Developing countries are bearing the greatest burden from the chronic diseases. Emerging diseases having greater influences on the economies. Sufficient skilled health workers are the requirements. Health challenges require active involvement of all levels of government. It is required to act together to overcome those health challenges now and to face an uncertain environment in future.

1. Introduction

Through surveillance system public health contributing in improving the health and quality of life by preventive and treatment approaches. For better health outcomes its activity includes assessing and evaluating the current services of the health care system, meeting the requirements of the stakeholders, selecting the appropriate interventions, cost-effective resource allocation, planning, educating and empowering people about the health issues. [1, 2, 3, 4]

Now a days the health care systems is market-oriented which is a technology-based entrepreneurial free market that giving the opportunity of higher quality of services at a lower costs. Health transformation is now a necessity. The Challenges are the homeland security, population ageing, and medical negligence, the increasing chronic and non-communicable diseases, less health care providers, unsustainable increase in costs of health care services and the disparities. The elimination of health disparities and an affordable access to quality care for the poorest must be a critical goal for now and the upcoming future. [5, 6]
