Charles Murray

Men are not tied to one another by papers and seals. They are led to associate by resemblances, by conformities, by sympathies.

—Edmund Burke

There are many practical problems that the Soviet Union must address concretely in the months to come: questions about how to organize a political system so that the people's interests are represented effectively, how to organize an economic system that produces prosperity, and how to organize an international system that not only prevents war but also establishes harmony. These are questions of considerable importance. But let us take a break from these practical affairs and think about something that seems at first glance to be impractical, subjective, unscientific—the stuff of daydreams and yearnings. Let us talk about happiness. More specifically, let us talk about what the American Declaration of Independence calls “the pursuit of happiness” and about how a government can help or hinder its citizens in that pursuit.

It is a question that may seem irrelevant to the Soviet Union in the fall of 1990. The Soviet people are demanding more and better food, shelter, and consumer goods. If the Soviet government can succeed in meeting those concerns, one may argue, happiness will take care of itself. That statement is surely true if one is talking about the immediate future. By all means, the Soviet Union should concentrate right now on raising its people's standard of living. But what of the future? A well-known American psychologist, Abraham Maslow
