investigates what it means to call ourselves human beings in relation to both our distant past and our possible futures as a species and the questions this might raise for our relationship with the myriad species with which we share the planet Drawing on insights from zoology theology cultural studies and aesthetics an international line up of contributors explore such topics as our origins as reflected in early cave art in the upper Palaeolithic through to our prospects at the forefront of contemporary biotechnology In the process the book positions the human in readiness for what many have characterized as our transhuman or posthuman future For if our status as rational animals or animals that think has traditionally distinguished us as apparently superior to other species this distinction has become increasingly problematic It has come to be seen as based on skills and technologies that do not distinguish us so much as position us as transitional animals It is the direction and consequences of this transition that is the central concern of Beyond Human Death, Dissection and the Destitute

Ruth Richardson, 2000 In the early nineteenth century body snatching was rife because the only corpses available for medical study were those of hanged murderers With the Anatomy Act of 1832 however the bodies of those who died destitute in workhouses were appropriated for dissection At a time when such a procedure was regarded with fear and revulsion the Anatomy Act effectively rendered dissection a punishment for poverty Providing both historical and contemporary insights Death Dissection and the Destitute opens rich new prospects in history and history of science The new afterword draws important parallels between social and medical history and contemporary concerns regarding organs for transplant and human tissue for research Real Scientists, Real Faith R J Berry, 2012-11-20 The science faith debate rages on Yet many

Commemorations And Memorials: Exploring The Human Face Of Anatomy Goran Strkalj, Nalini Pather, 2017-05-18 A major component of many modern human anatomy programs is commemorating people who have donated their body for education and research In addition some institutions have also organized memorial places to honor the body donors This book is an edited volume which explores the phenomena of commemorations and memorials in anatomy It includes both descriptive papers focusing on the content of the ceremonies and theoretical papers contextualizing and examining these within the broader ethical scientific medical and educational frameworks Building up on the idea of a community of practice the main objective of the volume is to enhance the exchange of ideas and sharing of experiences The concepts of commemoration and memorial in anatomy programs are presented as emerging They are seen as phenomena that will continue to evolve and ramify within different cultural and educational contexts and this volume is expected to facilitate these processes Indeed meager literature on the topic indicates potentially enormous practical value in sharing and combining practices from different cultural and teaching research traditions
