Ingham North Queensland prior to World War II Reading the entries Jeremy saw his mother s personality humour and caustic turn of phrase leap out at him but was surprised by how open and emotionally revealing his mother was as she recorded her struggles to come to terms with her new life She was far away from metropolitan Sydney where she had trained to become a nurse and even further from Urana in rural NSW where she had spent her childhood In Dressmakers Preachers and Cockies Jeremy quoted extensively from his mother s diary and while doing so came to see the importance of bringing the whole diary to a wider readership The result is his annotated transcription Mena s Diary An Anglican Rector s Wife in Ingham North Queensland 1937 1940 Jeremy doubts that his mother who died in 1974 would approve of his bringing her personal diary out in the open but believes the dearth of stories about the life experiences of women like Mena justifies his decision He is happy to live with the feeling of her sitting on his shoulder and scoffing at why he would think anyone would be interested
