Atonement and Intercession of Jesus Christ William Symington,2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1839 edition Excerpt tice was unsheathed against the man who is Jehovah s fellow and returned not to its scabbard till it had been bathed in the blood of Calvary It may be deemed at variance with this view of the subject that the redemption of man is sometimes in scripture ascribed simply to the blood of Christ or to his death alone But such language is not to be understood as limiting the atonement of Christ to the simple act of dying or to those sufferings in which there was an effusion of literal blood The bloody agony of the garden and the accursed death of the cross were prominent and concluding parts of his sufferings and by a common figure were fit representatives of the whole They were the last portions so to speak the completion of his humiliation without which all that went before must have been vain and may be regarded as having procured salvation in the same way as the last instalment of a sum which is paid by degrees may be supposed to cancel the debt and procure a discharge But as when Christ is said to have been obedient unto death we are to understand the phrase not of a single act but of the duration of his obedience throughout the whole period of his life so may it be said that he suffered unto death as expressive of the duration of his suffering throughout the whole of his earthly course III Yet is it not intended by these remarks to deny that a special importance attaches to the sufferings of ChrisVs soul and of the concluding period of his life It is impossible to peruse the scriptures attentively and not perceive that a special emphasis is put upon these We are not to confine the matter of atonement to any one kind or degree of suffering but as little are we at liberty to overlook the speciality that ON THE ATONEMENT & INTERCESSION William 1795-1862
