

Balance of Power in South Asia: The Politics of Nuclear Deterrence between Pakistan and India

Syed Hussain Shaheed Soherwordi & Fazal Wahid*

Abstract

Balance of Power mechanism is meant to ensure the existence of the nation state in the international system through creating a balancing mechanism or equilibrium of power. Political scene of Europe has been witnessing this mechanism for the last 400 years, though in varied forms. The arrival of nuclear weapons transformed the dynamics of the balance of power system. This factor has raised the relevance of balance of power in favor of political forces at the expense of military power. The realists, nonetheless, argue that it is the interplay of military and political dimensions of balance of power i.e. the characteristics of the nation state's balancing approach vis-a-vis the dominant player in the system. The concept of power equilibrium has led the Italian born political scientist A.F.K. Organski to opine that it is not equilibrium of power that guarantees peace, but the preponderance of power between great powers that leads to lasting peace and order in the international politics. Relatively weak players in the international system get engaged with strong ones to minimize their opponent's military threats and may opt for deterrence capability. As a result strategic balancing comes into effect. The focus of this study is to analyze the conventional power imbalance between India and Pakistan since independence. Super powers' struggle for influence in the South Asian region has been a great disturbing factor for regional equilibrium. It will also be analyzed in this study as to how the conventional and

The Balance Of Power In South Asia:

The Balance of Power in South Asia The Emirates Center for Strategic Studies and Research, 1999-10-27 The nuclear tests conducted by India and Pakistan in May 1998 have had far reaching implications not only for South Asia but for the Arab Gulf region On the surface the tests merely confirmed the existing nuclear capabilities in the two countries but the deeper impact has been to raise tension levels between India and Pakistan tilt the strategic balance of power in South Asia and adversely affect international arms control regimes thus indirectly undermining the national security of states already committed to nuclear non proliferation Events leading up to the nuclear tests and their aftermath point to three cornered nuclear interaction involving China India and Pakistan China s strategy of hemming in Indian power and influence is likely to be complicated by New Delhi s overt nuclear status Pakistan s nuclear capability has not altered the fundamental reality of India s conventional military superiority which may continue to be the dominant strategic factor on the subcontinent It is argued that the risks of war may have been heightened rather than negated by mutual nuclear deterrence and the overt nuclear status of India and Pakistan has undeniably raised the stakes in any future conflict on the Subcontinent This volume is based on papers that address the rationale behind the nuclear tests and their wider implications for South Asia while offering a Gulf perspective on these developments In addition to the issue of geographic proximity and the high number of South Asians working in the region a major concern is that of the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction WMD in other countries in the Middle East In this context it becomes imperative to consider ways to establish the region as a WMD free zone

V. Paul, James J. Wirtz, Michel Fortmann, 2004 Since the sudden disappearance of the Soviet Union many scholars have argued that the balance of power theory is losing its relevance This text examines this viewpoint as well as looking at systematic factors that may hinder or favour the return of balance of power politics The Balance of Power and State Policies Zhipai Chi, 2021-02-15 This book utilises publicly available materials such as US diplomatic cables leaked about a decade ago to provide an inside look at the regional dynamics between China and its East Asian neighbours It is increasingly important in this field to step out of the echo chamber of the West dominant narratives and to adopt a realistic assessment of the region There is a near consensus that East Asia is the most important region in the 21st century due to the size of its population and economy Nevertheless alarmist predictions about its future stability keep coming from pundits Indeed East Asia in the aftermath of the Cold War might provide the most likely case study for realists to prove their pessimism about inter-state relations due to historical rivalries territorial disputes economic competition great power politics and deep rooted realist beliefs among politicians in the region However East Asia has stayed defiant to these Western framings of regional dynamics People interested in East Asia and Chinese foreign policy will find this book useful in furthering their understanding of how China has interacted with other East Asian states in the post Cold War setting in light of tradition regional structure and great power competitions The Evolving Maritime Balance of Power in the Asia-Pacific Lawrence W. for the next 50 years How this surge in power is accommodated by the incumbent powers like the United States and Japan and how the new regional powers like China and India manage the power politics that emerge will be the key determinants of regional stability This volume examines the national maritime doctrines as well as the nuclear weapons developments at sea of the four major powers in the Asia Pacific namely China India Japan and the United States to see if the evolving dynamic is a cooperative or a competitive one In particular the volume looks at the evolving paradigms of maritime transformation in strategy and technology the emergent new maritime doctrines and evolving force postures in the naval orders of battle the role and operations of nuclear navies in the Asia Pacific and the implications and impact of nuclear weapons ballistic missiles and sea based missile defence responses in the region Southeast Asia and the Rise of Chinese and Indian Naval Power

Sam Bateman, Joshua Ho, 2014-06-03 This book examines the emerging maritime security scene in Southeast Asia It considers highly topical implications for the region of possible strategic competition between China and India the rising naval powers of Asia with a possible naval arms race emerging between these countries both with naval force development and operations As part of its Look East policy India has deployed naval units to the Pacific Ocean for port visits and exercises both with East Asian navies and the US Navy but India is also concerned about the possibility of the Chinese Navy operating in the Indian Ocean Even as the US India defence relationship continues to deepen the US and China are struggling to build a closer links China's and India's strategic interests overlap in this region both in maritime strategic competition or conflict which might be played out in the Bay of Bengal the Malacca and Singapore Straits and the South China Sea The sea lines of communication SLOCs through Southeast Asian waters constitute vital choke points between the Indian and Pacific Oceans carrying essential energy supplies for China and other Northeast Asian countries Any strategic competition between China and India has implications for other major maritime players in the Pacific and Indian Oceans especially Australia the Republic of Korea and Japan as well as the US This book identifies possible cooperative and confidence building measures that may contribute to enhanced relations between these two major powers and dampen down the risks associated with their strategic competition Constructing a Security Community in Southeast Asia Amitav Acharya, 2001 This book contains the most comprehensive and critical account available of the evolution of The Association of Southeast Asian Nations ASEAN norms and the viability of the ASEAN way of conflict management

The Balance of Power in South Asia: The Strategic Interests and Capabilities of India, China and Pakistan, 1999 In May of

1998 India and Pakistan each detonated a series of nuclear devices and as a result the world perception of the strategic situation in South Asia has changed considerably While the timing of the tests may have caught some analysts off guard the tests themselves were not overly surprising It has been understood by many experts in the field for some time that both countries possessed the capability if not the actual components to assemble and detonate nuclear weapons India had tested a crude device in 1974 calling it a peaceful nuclear explosion but did not test again until May 1998 pursuing a path of nuclear ambiguity Likewise while Pakistan has maintained an even more ambiguous stance it nevertheless has hinted at some nuclear weapons capability since the early 1 990s The tests only served to confirm what we already knew about the two countries but at the same time they place us in a position to explore the strategic interests of the region in the shadow of the tests
