

4.5.2 Organizations of hospital pharmacy services

In organizing hospital pharmacy services, both the way in which the staff is organized and the physical layout of the building must be considered.

Personnel

Hospital pharmacy personnel can be divided into three major categories:

1. Management. Management includes the chief pharmacist and various deputy chief pharmacists, who are responsible for procurement, distribution, and control of all pharmaceuticals used within the institution and the management of personnel within the pharmacy department.
2. Professional staff. These professionals are qualified pharmacists who procure, distribute, and control medications and support staff for their activities. In some facilities, pharmacists provide clinical consulting services and medical consultations.
3. Support staff. The support staff category often includes a combination of trained pharmacy technicians, clinical personnel, and managers.

The smallest hospitals may have only one or two pharmacy staff members, with the chief pharmacist as the only pharmacist. Larger teaching hospitals that provide extensive pharmaceutical distribution and clinical services may have more than 1,000 staff members.

They range from local or world-famous teaching institutions, such as an up-to-date manual of policies and procedures, staff members should be familiar with the manual and suffice to it.

Physical organization

The extent of the pharmacy's physical facility is determined by the size of the hospital and the services provided. A large pharmacy department might have the following sections within one centralized space or in separate locations throughout the hospital:

- Administration office
- Stock, storage
- Preparation of dispensing drug factors
- Manufacturing and repackaging
- Intravenous solutions (compounding)
- Registration and instrument dispensing
- Medication information resource center
- After-hours pharmacy
- Emergency medication storage

Dispensing, dispensing, or sometimes other form satellite pharmacies throughout the hospital. In larger hospitals, satellite pharmacies are beneficial because they enable a better environmental control that individual medications undergo before distribution again (that dispense medications packaged for individual patients). Satellites also increase the pharmacist's presence in the patient care area, facilitating interaction with medical staff, nursing staff, and patients, while also ultimately improving patient care.

With satellite pharmacies, there is reduced need for stock levels. However, each satellite requires a certain minimum inventory level of pharmaceuticals. A system with multiple satellites must likely have a higher total inventory level than that of a central pharmacy system. The higher inventory and additional personnel costs incurred by staff satellite pharmacists may be justified by reductions in pharmaceutical supply costs. Overall, there is less waiting and improvements in patient care. Although no one satellite pharmacy has sole responsibility, separate pharmacists often serve hospitals and outpatient clinics. Figure 4.5-1 illustrates how a hospital pharmacy with separate inpatient and outpatient departments is organized in one African country.

4.5.3 Hospital drug and therapeutic committee

Most commonly, the committee designated to ensure the safe and effective use of medications in the hospital is the DTC. The American Society of Health-System Pharmacists' guidelines on DTCs state that "medication use by an individual consumer and therapeutic processes that require constant evaluation." Organizations need to implement tools and processes necessary to meet the goals of using medications effectively and safely." (ASHP 2006).

Program and functions

The DTC promotes the rational use of medications through the development of evidence policies and procedures for medications selection, procurement, distribution, and use and through the education of patients and staff. Chapter 4.5-1 lists the functions of the DTC in an African hospital.

In some hospitals, the DTC becomes overburdened with the difficulty of addressing and supporting supply of medications. Members can accept up to ten decisions about specific medications. As they have results, and from others, other others focusing on long-term planning, policies, and programs for improving the safe and cost-effective use of medications. As discussed, in most settings, daily purchasing decisions can be handled by the chief pharmacist, with interpretation by the DTC or another committee responsible for price control.
