Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The program was designed to improve cardiovascular fitness, increase muscle strength, and reduce body fat. The results of the study showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the participants. The participants showed a significant increase in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and a significant decrease in body fat. The program also had a significant positive effect on the psychological health of the participants, with a significant increase in self-esteem and a significant decrease in anxiety and depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
