

Telling Our Stories

the fox came every evening to my door asking for nothing. my fear trapped me inside, hoping to dismiss her but she sat till morning, waiting.

at dawn we would, each of us, rise from our haunches, look through the glass then walk away.

did she gather her village around her and sing of the hairless moon face, the trembling snout, the ignorant eyes?

child, i tell you now it was not the animal blood i was hiding from, it was the poet in her, the poet and the terrible stories she could tell.

Modern Essays and Stories Various Authors, 1912-01-01 In all schools pupils are expected to write essays but curiously enough essay reading and essay writing are taught but little In spite of that neglect the essay is so altogether natural and spontaneous in spirit so intensely personal in expression and so demanding of excellence of prose style that it is the form par excellence for consideration in school if teachers are to show pupils much concerning the art of writing well The essay is to prose what the lyric is to poetry complete genuine and beautiful self expression or better still self revelation Most of the writing done in schools is straightforward narration of events without much if any attempt to show personal reactions on those events mere diary like accounts at best mechanical descriptions that aim to present exterior appearance without attempting to reveal inner meanings or to show awakened emotions and stereotyped explanations and arguments drawn for the most part from books of reference or from slight observation Beyond all this mechanical work lies a field of throbbing personal life of joyous reactions on all the myriads of interests that lie close at hand of meditations on the wonders of plant and animal life of humorous or philosophic comments on human nature and of all manner of vague dreams and aspirations aroused by Such sights as youthful poets dream On summer eves by haunted stream Without the slightest question it is the duty of the school and of the teacher in particular to lead pupils to appreciate honesty and originality in unapplied unpragmatic self expression and to show pupils how they themselves may gain the very real pleasure of putting down on paper permanent records of their own intimate thinking Joseph Addison's The Sir Roger de Coverley Papers and Washington Irving's Sketch Book have for many years made valiant but unsuccessful efforts to fill the places that should be filled by more modern representatives of the essay. Macaulay's Essay on Johnson is a biographical article for an encyclopedia; his essays on Clive and on Hastings are polemics; and Carlyle's Essay on Burns is a critical disquisition. With the exception of The Sir Roger de Coverley Papers, all these so-called essays are of considerable length and are unfitted to serve as the best examples of the essay form for the essay like the lyric demands brevity; it is after all only a quick flash of self-revelation, not a sustained effort. Then again, who would wish to learn to write like Addison, like Washington Irving, like Macaulay, or like Carlyle? Those great writers couched their thoughts in the language fashions of their days just as they clothed their bodies in the garments of their times. To imitate either their style of expression or their costumes would be to make one's self ridiculous or to take part in a species of masquerade. The extremely Latinized vocabulary of 1711 or the resonant periods and marked antitheses of 1850 are as old-fashioned to day as are the once highly respected periwigs, great coats, and silver shoe buckles of the past. The thoughts of yesterday are not the thoughts of to day. There is in serious reality such a thing as an old-fashioned point of view. With all due reverence for the past, the best teachers of to day believe that it is just as necessary for students to use present-day methods of expression and to cultivate present-day interests as it is to take advantage of the railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, the automobile, and the thousand other mechanical contrivances that aid life to day but which were unknown in 1711 or in 1850.

Elucidating Essay Poetry Denny JA, 2020-07-01 Essay poetry is only one variation among many forms of poetry that already exist and which will exist in the future. I do not pretend or claim to be superior or inferior to other forms of poetry. It also does not purport to either dominate or homogenize poetry. It is just one rose from the exuberant garden of Eden which is filled with many other types of flowers. It is just one deer of a certain species that dwells among many other kinds of wildlife. It is only one color, orange, among a rainbow which is enriched by a variety of other colors. Prize Poems by Women of the Harlem Renaissance Helene Johnson, Gwendolyn Bennett, Georgia Douglas Johnson, Blanche Taylor Dickinson, Mae V. Cowdery, Alice Dunbar-Nunley, Carrie W. Clifford, Ethel M. Cautin, Effie Lee Newsome, Clarissa Scott Delaney, Lucy Ariel Williams, Esther Popel, Dora Lawrence Houston, Marguerite A. Lowe, Mary M. Newman, 2025-03-14 This poetry collection is the first to be dedicated to poems by women who received a cash prize or honorable mention in a groundbreaking series of Harlem Renaissance literary contests. These contests highlighted the most celebrated poets of the era and NEARLY HALF WERE WOMEN. Women poets were respected, celebrated, and vital members of the Harlem Renaissance literary community. Their individual strength and creativity are evident in the number and quality of poems acknowledged in national literary contests. This volume offers a deeper understanding of Harlem Renaissance poetry by showcasing women's voices which were recognized in their time but largely overlooked in ours. For three consecutive years from 1925 until 1927, The Crisis and Opportunity, two national African American periodicals, conducted annual literary contests. See The Harlem Renaissance
