The Trickster Brain David Williams,2012-05-29 Until recently scientific and literary cultures have existed side by side but most often in parallel universes without connection The Trickster Brain Neuroscience Evolution and Nature by David Williams addresses the premise that humans are a biological species stemming from the long process of evolution and that we do exhibit a universal human nature given to us through our genes From this perspective literature is shown to be a product of our biological selves By exploring central ideas in neuroscience evolutionary biology linguistics music philosophy ethics religion and history Williams shows that it is the circuitry of the brain s hard wired dispositions that continually create similar tales around the world archetypal stories reflecting ancient tensions that arose from our evolutionary past and the very construction of our brains The book asserts that to truly understand literature one must look at the biological creature creating it By using the lens of science to examine literature we can see how stories reveal universal aspects of the biological mind The Trickster character is particularly instructive as an archetypal character who embodies a raft of human traits and concerns for Trickster is often god devil musical sexual silver tongued animal and human at once treading upon the moral dictates of culture Williams brings together science and the humanities demonstrating a critical way of approaching literature that incorporates scientific thought

Re-thinking Development in Africa Komla Tsey, 2011-10-03 In this thought provoking book Komla Tsey argues that if governments NGOs development donor agencies and researchers are serious about development in Africa they need to get down to ground level both metaphorically and literally They must search deep into Africa's own rich oral traditions by creating space and opportunity for ordinary Africans whose voices have so far been conspicuously absent in the development discourse to tell and share their own stories of development Story sharing as research methodology acts as a mirror reflecting the participants self evaluation of where they have come from where they are now and how to proceed into the future They are strategies that can empower and enable individuals and communities of people to be agents of their own change which in Tsey's view is what development is all about
