

SITE PLANNING AND DESIGN FOR THE ELDERLY

The background of the cover is a detailed architectural site plan. It features several rectangular building footprints, some with internal room divisions. A network of paths or roads winds through the site, connecting different areas. Numerous circular symbols of varying sizes are scattered throughout, representing trees or landscaping elements. The drawing is rendered in a light, sketchy style, typical of preliminary site planning.

Shelter and Service Issues for Aging Populations Leon A Pastalan,2014-01-09 Shelter and Service Issues for Aging Populations takes you for an inside look at what policies in Western Europe Canada and the United States have done to meet the housing and service needs of the elderly and the disabled and what policies have yet to accomplish As you learn about a wide range of cost effective and successful housing options such as congregate housing home equity conversions and homesharing you will learn about the challenges of providing responsive high quality housing and living arrangements to meet the needs of different populations As this insightful book reveals the psychosocial needs of elderly and disabled persons have often been neglected in efforts to provide appropriate physical accommodation and services and shelter are seldom coordinated to respond to the changes individuals experience Shelter and Service Issues for Aging Populations shows you how federal and state provincial governments nonprofit organizations and private groups have all implemented policies to create barrier free housing Yet at the same time most Western countries have not developed comprehensive grant and loan programs to allow the elderly and disabled to modify their homes As this book walks you through the problems that exist it shows you how policymakers architects social work practitioners and academics housing developers and community leaders can work together to improve housing conditions and services Along the way you will learn about the failure of health care systems to cover home modifications the Fair Housing Act Amendment stigmatizing effects of the elderly label in obtaining community accommodation differences between environmental needs of rural and urban seniors current patterns of housing and living arrangements of older Canadians the effects of demographic aging on the urban ecology the Abbeyfield model of congregate housing continuing care retirement communities aging in place Shelter and Service Issues for Aging Populations looks at the strengths and weaknesses of different approaches to housing and service provision to help housing policy specialists gerontologists social workers community leaders architects and housing developers find stronger more effective solutions for giving people the home environments they need Don t continue to supply inadequate housing to people with special needs Let this book inform you guide you and contribute to the shaping of important new housing and service policies

Journal of Rehabilitation Research & Development ,2007 Journal of Rehabilitation R & D ,2007 Compensating for Psychological Deficits and Declines Roger A. Dixon,Lars B.,ckman,Lars Backman,2013-06-17 The concept of compensation in psychology refers to processes through which a gap or mismatch between current accessible skills and environmental demands is reduced or closed These gaps can be principally the result of losses such as those associated with aging or interpersonal role changes injuries such as those that may occur to the neurological or sensory systems organic or functional diseases such as the dementias or schizophrenia and congenital deficits such as those apparent in autism or some learning disabilities Whether the demand skill gaps can be bridged completely reduced only moderately or are impossible to close depends on a variety of factors In every case however the guiding notions of compensation are that some such deficits may be amendable the continuation of the effects of the gap may be avoidable and some functioning may be recoverable In this sense compensation is related to adaptation it is about overcoming deficits managing the effects of losses and promoting improvement in psychological functioning Compensation is a concept that has a long and rich history in numerous domains of psychological research and practice To date however few of the relevant research domains have benefitted explicitly or optimally from considering alternative perspectives on the concept of compensation Although researchers and practitioners in several areas of psychology have actively pursued programs with compensation as a central concept communication across disciplinary divides has been lacking Comparing and contrasting the uses and implications of the concept across neighboring and even not so adjacent areas of psychology can promote advances in both theoretical and practical pursuits The goal of this book is to carry inchoate integrative efforts to a new level of clarity To this end the editors have recruited major authors from selected principal areas of research and practice in psychological compensation The authors review the current state of compensation scholarship in their domains of specialization State of the art reviews of this rapidly expanding area of scholarship are therefore collected under one cover for the first time In this way a wide variety of readers who might otherwise rarely cross professional paths with one another can quickly learn about alternative preferences agendas and methods as well as novel research results interpretations and practical applications Designed to contain broad deep and current perspectives on compensation this volume continues the processes of explicating the concept of compensation linking and distinguishing compensation from neighboring concepts describing the variety of compensatory mechanisms operating in a wide range of phenomena and illustrating how compensatory mechanisms can be harnessed or trained to manage losses or deficits and to promote gains or at least maintenance of functioning
