Hearing and Sound Communication in Fishes W.N. Tavolga, A.N. Popper, R.R. Fay, 2012-12-06 This volume is a compilation of the papers presented at a meeting that took place in April 1980 at the Mote Marine Laboratory Sarasota Florida The meeting and this volume are outgrowths of two earlier international meetings on marine bio acoustics that occurred in 1963 and 1966 Tavolga 1964 1967 The first meeting took place at the Lerner Marine Laboratory of the American Museum of Natural History while the second meeting was at the American Museum itself and was under the sponsorship of the Department of Animal Behavior It is apparent that these two volumes have had immense impact on the current study of marine bio acoustics and particularly on fish audition In a preliminary conference in Sarasota in 1979 we decided that it was time for another such meeting to bring together as many as possible of the investigators interested in fish acoustics in order to assess the current state of our knowledge and predict directions for research for the next several years Such a meeting appeared particularly timely since over the past four or five years there have been many new studies that have provided new empirical and theoretical work on basic mechanisms of fish audition Furthermore it became evident as we made up preliminary lists of possible participants that few of the currently active workers were in the field back in 1966 In fact of the current participants only Drs

A Review of the World Resources of Mesopelagic Fish J. Gjøsæter, K. Kawaguchi, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1980-01-01. A fish species can be called mesopelagic if it spends the day in the mesopelagic zone. The mesopelagic zone has been defined in different ways based on depth, temperature and light regimes. For the present purpose depth seems to be the best criterion and mesopelagic fish can thus be defined as species generally spending the day at depths between approximately 200 and 1 000 m. Generally they perform a diel migration coming to the upper 200 m or even to the surface during the night. The present report briefly reviews the systematics, ecology and life history of important groups of mesopelagic fish. Further, some methods used for abundance estimation of these fish are described and discussed. The bulk of the report reviews the present knowledge of abundance and species composition of mesopelagic fish in each of the FAO statistical areas. Although the data in most cases are few, an attempt has been made to give tentative estimates of the biomass and production in the various areas. When available information on the life history of the most important species in each area is also given.
