South Asia A Historical Narrative:

South Asia Mohammad Yunus, Aradhana Parmar, 2003 This book highlights for the first time in South Asian historiography the physical conditions and geological events that created this subcontinent 50 million years ago Those events led to the emergence of one of the first human civilizations in the Indus valley It also explains why for five thousand years the South Asians did not invade other lands but were constantly invaded themselves All of them settled down and made the subcontinent their home except Britain and its merchants who came by sea remained off shore siphoned its wealth and left it in tatters when they departed The impact of the rise of European sea power on the subcontinent has been highlighted and for the first time it has been strategically explained why the sea faring colonial powers wanted to establish strong forts on the Afro Asian coasts and how great empires of India and China remained unable to dismantle those forts that eventually led to the crumbling of those empires This book reflects two different historical narratives Hindu and Muslim and offers a balanced and objective view of one of the longest uninterrupted histories of the world by carefully considering the historical circumstances that created not only differences but also similarities in the experiences of the people of South Asia Drawing on new evidence and research it provides a fresh perspective on the politics of historical narrative History and Collective Memory in South Asia, 1200-2000 Sumit Guha, 2019-11-04 In this far ranging and erudite exploration of the South Asian past Sumit Guha discusses the shaping of social and historical memory in world historical context He presents memory as the result of both remembering and forgetting and of the preservation recovery and decay of records By describing how these processes work through sociopolitical organizations Guha delineates the historiographic legacy acquired by the British in colonial India the creation of the centralized educational system and mass production of textbooks that led to unification of historical discourses under colonial auspices and the divergence of these discourses in the twentieth century under the impact of nationalism and decolonization Guha brings together sources from a range of languages and regions to provide the first intellectual history of the ways in which socially recognized historical memory has been made across the subcontinent This thoughtful study contributes to debates beyond the field of history that complicate the understanding of objectivity and documentation in a seemingly post truth world Memory, Nationalism, and Narrative in Contemporary South Asia J. Edward Mallot, 2012-09-25 This book investigates the ambivalent responses to the opposing compulsions of memory and forgetting in cultural production in South Asia Mallot reveals how writers such as Salman Rushdie Michael Ondaatje and Amitav Ghosh indict nationalism's sins by accessing and encoding the past Time, History and the Religious Imaginary in South Asia Anne Murphy, 2012-03-12 Religious imaginary is a way of conceiving and structuring the world within the conceptual and imaginative traditions of the religious Using religious imaginary as a reference this book analyses temporal ideologies and expressions of historicity in South Asia in the early modern pre colonial and early colonial period Chapters explore the multiple understandings of time and the past that informed the historical imagination in various kinds of literary representations including historiographical and literary texts hagiography and religious canonical literature The book addresses the contributing forces and comparative implications of the formation of religious and communitarian sensibilities as expressed through the imagination of the past and suggests how these relate to each other within and across traditions in South Asia By bringing diverse materials together this book presents new commonalities and distinctions that inform a larger understanding of how religion and other cultural formations impinge on the concept of temporality and the representation of it as history

The Archaeology of Early Medieval and Medieval South Asia Swadhin Sen, Supriya Varma, Bhairabi Prasad Sahu, 2022-11-30 This book looks at the ways in which archaeological methods have been used in debates concerning the early medieval and medieval periods in South Asia. Despite the incorporation and use of archaeological data to corroborate historical narratives, the theories and methods of archaeology are largely ignored in and excluded from the dominating institutionalized and hegemonic disciplinary discourses. The volume offers contesting insights, polemical narratives and new data from archaeological contexts to initiate a debate on many foundational premises of archaeological and historical narratives. It focuses on the much neglected region of the Eastern Ganga Brahmaputra Basin as a spatial frame to do this and studies themes such as spatial and temporal scales of concepts and methods, multi-scalar factors and processes of continuity and change, the settlement archaeology of the alluvial landscape, changing patterns of agrarian transformation and material cultures including coins, inscriptions, pottery and sculptures in their contexts in sub-regional, regional and supra-regional intersections. Dedicated to historian Brajadulal Chattopadhyaya, this volume presents a crucial and unprecedented intervention in the study of the early medieval and the medieval periods. It will be useful for scholars and researchers of archaeology, ancient history, medieval history, water history, earth sciences, palaeoecology, historical ecology, epigraphy, art history, material culture studies, Indian history and South Asian studies in general.

Transcultural Humanities in South Asia Waseem Anwar, Nosheen Yousaf, 2022-03-15 This volume looks at the implications of transcultural humanities in South Asia, which is becoming a crucial area of research within literary and cultural studies. The volume also explores various complex critical dimensions of transculturation: its indeterminate periodisation, its temporal and spatial nonlinearity, its territoriality and intersectionality. Drawing on contributors from around the globe, the entries look at literature and poetics, theory and praxis, borders and nations, politics, Partition, gender and sexuality, the environment, representations in art and pedagogy and the transcultural classroom. Using key examples and case studies, the contributors look at current developments in transcultural and transnational standpoints and their possible educational outcomes. A broad and comprehensive collection as it also speaks about the value of the humanities and the significance of South Asian contexts, Transcultural Humanities in South Asia will be of particular interest to those working on postcolonial studies, literary studies, Asian studies and more.

Religion, Narrative and Public Imagination in South Asia James Hegarty, 2013-03 The Sanskrit Mahabharata is one of the greatest works of world literature and pivotal for the understanding of both Hindu traditions and wider society in ancient, medieval and modern South Asia. This book presents a new synthesis of philological, anthropological and cognitive linguistic method and theory in relation to the study of narrative text by focusing on the form and function of the Mahabharata in the context of early South Asia. Arguing that the combination of structural and thematic features that have helped to establish the enduring cultural centrality of religious narrative in South Asia was first outlined in the text, the book highlights the Mahabharata's complex orientation to the cosmic social and textual past. The book shows the extent to which narrative is integral to human social life and more generally the creation and maintenance of religious ideologies. It highlights the contexts of origin and transmission and the cultural function of the Mahabharata in first millennium South Asia and by extension in medieval and modern South Asia by drawing on both textual and epigraphic sources. The book draws attention to what is culturally specific about the origination and transmission of early South Asian narrative and what can be used to enrich our orientation to narrative in human social life more globally.

Islam in South Asia Jamal Malik, 2008-10-31 Islamic South Asia has become a focal point in academia. Where did Muslims come from? How did they fare in interacting with Hindu cultures? How did they negotiate identity as ruling and ruled minorities and majorities? Part I covers early Muslim expansion and the formative phase in context of initial cultural encounter app 700-1300. Part II views the establishment of Muslim empire cultures oscillating between Islamic and Islamicate centralised and regionalised power app 1300-1700. Part III is composed in the backdrop of regional centralisation, territoriality and colonial rule displaying processes of integration and differentiation of Muslim cultures in colonial setting app 1700-1930. Tensions between Muslim pluralism and singularity evolving in public sphere make up the fourth cluster app 1930-2002.

Trans-Colonial Modernities in South Asia Michael S. Dodson, Brian A. Hatcher, 2013-02-28 Presenting cutting edge scholarship dedicated to exploring the emergence and articulation of modernity in colonial South Asia, this book builds upon and extends recent insights into the constitutive and multiple projects of colonial modernity. Eschewing the fashionable binaries of resistance and collaboration, the contributors seek to reconceptualize modernity as a local and transitive practice of cultural conjunction. Whether through a close reading of Anglo-Indian poetry, Urdu rhyming dictionaries, Persian Bible translations, Jain court records or Bengali polemical literature, the contributors interpret South Asian modernity as emerging from localized, partial and continuously negotiated efforts among a variety of South Asian and European elites. Surveying a range of individuals, regions and movements, this book supports reflection on the ways traditional scholars and other colonial agents actively appropriated and repurposed elements of European knowledge, colonial administration, ruling ideology and material technologies. The book conjures a trans-colonial and trans-national context in which ideas of history, religion, language, science and nation are defined across disparate religious, ethnic and linguistic boundaries. Providing new insights into the negotiation and reinterpretation of Western knowledge and modernity, this book is of interest to students and scholars of South Asian Studies as well as of intellectual and colonial history, comparative literature and religious studies.
