The Factory:

The Factory Acts Great Britain, Thomas Tapping, 1855

The Factory Girl and the Seamstress Amal

Amireh, 2021-12-24 This book studies the representations of working class women in canonical and popular American fiction between 1820 and 1870. These representations have been invisible in nineteenth century American literary and cultural studies due to the general view that antebellum writers did not engage with their society's economic and social realities. Against this view and to highlight the cultural importance of working class women, this study argues that in responding to industrialization, middle class writers such as Melville, Hawthorne, Fern Davis and Phelps used the figures of the factory worker and the seamstress to express their anxieties about unstable gender and class identities. These fictional representations were influenced by and contributed to an important but understudied cultural debate about wage labor, working women and class.

The Factory Question and Industrial England, 1830-1860 Robert Gray, 2002-04-04 The Factory Question and Industrial England addresses the continuing controversy over industrialisation. It investigates different perceptions of the factory system, either as a threat or a promise, and the contested meanings of waged work in industry. Making use of a great variety of sources such as sermons, medical treatises, fictional and visual representations, Robert Gray places the languages of debate in their cultural contexts, paying particular attention to the shifting constructions of class and gender in the rhetoric of reform and the ambiguities and tensions inherent in protective legislation. He then relates patterns of conflict over factory legislation to the features of specific industrial towns. The combination of regional cultural and textual analysis makes this book a coherent and original contribution to the study of industrial Britain in the nineteenth century.

The factory in a garden Helena Chance, 2017-02-28 When we think about Victorian factories, Dark Satanic Mills might spring to mind, images of blackened buildings and exhausted, exploited workers struggling in unhealthy and ungodly conditions. But for some employees, this image was far from the truth, and this is the subject of The Factory in a Garden, which traces the history of a factory gardens movement from its late eighteenth century beginnings in Britain to its twenty-first century equivalent in Google's vegetable gardens at their headquarters in California. The book is the first study of its kind, examining the development of parks, gardens and outdoor leisure facilities for factories in Britain and America as a model for the reshaping of the corporate environment in the twenty-first century. This is also the first book to give a comprehensive account of the contribution of gardens, gardening and recreation to the history of responsible capitalism and ethical working practices.

Forcing the Factory of the Future Bryn Jones, 1997-06-26 Is computerised production transforming work roles as recent debates about flexible specialisation and post-Fordist manufacturing suggest? This book focuses on the key case of metalworking batch production in Britain Italy Japan and the USA Looking at technological political and social developments from a comparative perspective it suggests that comprehensive factory principles never fully replaced workshop organisation Drawing on empirical case studies of flexible manufacturing systems Bryn Jones offers a new distinction between the bureaucratic bias of Taylorism and the product standardisation approach of Fordism and questions whether computerised production is transcending Fordism Instead of the often predicted models of deskilled centrally controlled work or a decentralised craft renaissance he shows a greater likelihood of national variations between factory and workshop principles continuing into the contemporary age of computerisation
