Sourcebook on Health Sciences Librarianship Ching-chih Chen, 1977 Introduction to Health Sciences Librarianship M. Sandra Wood, 2008

Introduction to Health Sciences Librarianship covers a wide range of areas beyond traditional medical libraries. This helpful guide provides an overview of the health care environment, academic health sciences, hospital libraries, health informatics, and more. This single volume provides a sound foundation on health sciences libraries to students, beginning and practicing librarians alike.

Health Sciences Librarianship M. Sandra Wood, 2014

This comprehensive textbook of health sciences librarianship provides the library student and new librarian with the background and skills necessary to handle day to day activities and provide quality services in a health sciences library or a more general library serving students and practitioners in the health professions. The book has 16 chapters, each authored by an experienced medical librarian, and is organized logically into 4 sections: The Profession, Collection Services, User Services, and Administrative Services. Each chapter contains photographs, figures, tables, and charts illustrating the essential concepts introduced. Overseen by a 3 member editorial board of leading professors in medical librarianship programs, this authoritative text provides students, beginning and experienced librarians, with a comprehensive overview of the state of the art of medical librarianship.

Introduction to Health Sciences Librarianship Frank Kellerman, 1997-01-21

Health sciences librarianship today demands a balance among computer files, human ingenuity, and print sources. The many information sources presently available enable health sciences librarians to do a better job, but that job has also become correspondingly more difficult. This professional reference surveys the various types of print and electronic resources important to the health sciences and provides valuable practical advice to librarians for meeting the information needs of researchers, practicing physicians, and other health professionals. Health sciences librarianship today demands a balance among electronic files, human ingenuity, and print sources. Thanks to computerization and telecommunications, librarians can do much more now than just a few years ago. While the tremendous growth in available resources has enabled librarians to provide more thorough information to patrons, the process of doing so has become correspondingly more complex. While librarians still need to use many traditional skills, they must also develop new ways of finding and utilizing information. This professional reference surveys the field of health sciences librarianship and provides extensive practical advice to assist health sciences librarians in meeting the information needs of their patrons. Because journal literature is the principal medium of information in the health sciences, the book begins with an examination of the roles that journals play, as well as the large proportion of the library budget that they consume. The volume then discusses techniques of searching journal literature, such as print and electronic indexing and abstracting tools. Additional chapters are devoted to the selection and organization of health sciences books and reference tools and services. Special attention is given to the electronic distribution of biomedical information. With important sources of health information now becoming available via the Internet, this book provides a point of departure to evaluate those sources.

The final chapter discusses the various environments that shape health sciences librarianship such as library settings professional associations and economic contexts Health Sciences Information Sources Ching-chih Chen,1981 Intended primarily as a reference guide for health sciences librarians and their assistants and as a textbook for library school students engaged in the study of the structure properties and output of biomedical and clinical literature Current source covering for the most part 1970 April 1980 Each entry gives bibliographic information annotation and review sources Includes both primary and secondary sources Title author indexes Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.),1982 First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965 70 The New OPL Sourcebook Judith A. Conte,2016-08-29 In 2005 the National Institutes of Health NIH announced the Clinical and Translational Science Award CTSA program an institution based grant intended to re engineer the clinical research enterprise speeding the time from pre clinical discovery to the development of therapies to improve human health As universities competed for CTSA funding and often struggled to develop or recalibrate institutional infrastructures and research support services the face of pre clinical and clinical research changed dramatically These changes and their intended and unintended consequences introduced the possibility of new roles for health sciences librarians creating novel opportunities to engage with researchers research administrators and community members as active partners in the research enterprise This book demystifies translational research by providing a comprehensive historical background and context on the CTSA program including the impact of funding reductions and administrative changes The highlight of the book are case studies by librarians from CTSA Consortium institutions These case studies including successes challenges and lessons learned will detail specific routes to librarian involvement in translational research including collection development creating and maintaining relationships with researchers and administrators instruction and training data management team science and more The variety of case studies including challenges and lessons learned will help libraries that are looking for ways to engage the translational research audiences at their institutions or those who currently work with CTS but face new challenges due to declining federal research funds shifting institutional priorities or other factors The book will not be a comprehensive accounting of librarian engagement at each institutions but rather a sample of best practices to help librarians develop programs and relationships relevant to translational research and a look at newly emerging opportunities to leverage skills in information organization and dissemination
