Westminster Tales Steve Barnett,Ivor Gaber,2001-05-21 Politics today is inextricably bound to the media indeed it is now a routine assumption that the media can determine election outcomes Consequently over the last twenty years the conduct of politics has become increasingly driven by what might play well on television or in the press Election campaigning budgets party platforms and even the contents of legislative bills are dominated by media considerations Westminster Tales explores how that relationship works in practice What sort of deals are done between politicians and journalists What tactics do politicians use to try and manipulate the media What are journalists techniques of resistance What determines how a campaign is put together Have policy issues and the national good really been surrendered to image making and sound bite tactics Barnett and Gaber examine the modern process of political communication through the eyes of the many actors now involved Through their own experiences and through personal interviews conducted with many of the key media and political figures they construct a vivid picture of how political communication is managed today and the direction in which it is going

Making Health Policy, 2016-08-29 What shapes health policy Current thinking dictates that scientific evidence should be the basis for policy making in healthcare but is this a new approach and how has it developed Making Health Policy shows how networks in science and the media have established a dialogue for policy making since 1945 Surprisingly many of the networks influencing health policy are not political ones central to public discussion Instead scientific networks have shaped policies on public health based upon findings of chronic disease epidemiology For policies on illicit drugs the clinical experience of a small group of psychiatrists held sway And ironically in an ever cost conscious world high technology areas such as renal dialysis saw economic considerations diminish as time passed Health pressure groups entered the equation and the last half of the twentieth century witnessed the rise of the media as the defining agency in the science policy relationship Making Health Policy is the first historical study to explore the unspoken links between science and recent health policy
