South Chicago, U.S.A. James J. Klekowski, 2002 Nothin' but Blue Skies Edward McClelland, 2013-05-21 The Upper Midwest and Great Lakes region became the arsenal of democracy the greatest manufacturing center in the world in the years during and after World War II thanks to natural advantages and a welcoming culture Decades of unprecedented prosperity followed memorably punctuated by riots strikes burning rivers and oil embargoes A vibrant quintessentially American character bloomed in the region s cities suburbs and backwaters But the innovation and industry that defined the Rust Belt also helped to hasten its demise An air conditioner invented in Upstate New York transformed the South from a sweaty backwoods to a nonunionized industrial competitor Japan and Germany recovered from their defeat to build fuel efficient cars in the stagnant 1970s The tentpole factories that paid workers so well also filled the air with soot and poisoned waters and soil The jobs drifted elsewhere and many of the people soon followed suit Nothin but Blue Skies tells the story of how the country s industrial heartland grew boomed bottomed and hopes to be reborn Through a propulsive blend of storytelling and reportage celebrated writer Edward McClelland delivers the rise fall and revival of the Rust Belt and its people vision American Studies by Michael Carlebach Many years ago I concluded that for me truth and beauty and perhaps wit and wisdom as well are more likely to reside in what is ordinary and seemingly insignificant This is perhaps a sideways look at America and American culture but it is one that can produce moments that describe us all but without makeup and bereft of a spokesperson Mapping The Democratic Forest The Postsouthern Spaces of William Eggleston by Ben Child When the color photographs of William Eggleston first appeared at the Museum of Modern Art in 1976 the boldness of Eggleston's palette and his disregard for the conventions of black and white photography were shocking nearly all the major critics were scornful and Ansel Adams wrote a scathing letter of protest Stereo Propaganda by Lynn Marshall Linnemeier In this examination magic and myth two of my favorite vehicles act as buffers to the dominant power structure It brings together two bodies of collectibles one personal and one commercial with the intent of shifting stereotypes about race and southern culture Interview Those little color snapshots William Christenberry interviewed by William R Ferris Santa Claus had brought me and my sister a small Brownie camera in the late 1940s and I just loaded it with color film and went out to that Alabama landscape and began to photograph what caught my eye Heroes of Hell Hole Swamp Photographs of South Carolina Midwives by Hansel Mieth and W Eugene Smith by Dolores Flamiano Mieth and Smith shared a belief that photography could bring social change They viewed Pat Clark and Maude Callen as heroic healers whose stories would inspire racial understanding Both photographers shot powerful images of the most visceral human experiences birth death sexuality and disease Women Working by Susan Harbage Page Rough It is rough being a female Not Forgotten The Day Is Past and Gone Family Photographs from Eastern North Carolina By Scott Matthews It is in fact hard to get the camera to tell the truth yet it can be made to in many ways and on many levels Some of the best photographs we are ever likely to see are innocent domestic snapshots All eight articles from this issue of Southern Cultures are also available individually as stand alone ebooks
